JUSTICES' AGES FAIL TO SWAY OPINIONS, SURVEY REVEALS

All Present Members of Bench Have Concurred in Declaring at Least 10 Laws Unconstitutional.

Court Survey.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

Although the three members of the Supreme Court under 70 years of age in recent years have turned out more written opinions of the tribunal than those over that age, the latter, with one exception, have not greatly lagged behind in such work, a survey of the work of the court revealed yesterday.

Indeed, a survey of the number of opinions written by justices of the Supreme Court since 1923 indicated there is little direct relation between the age of the justices and the work they perform in this respect—just as a previous survey made by The Washington Post revealed no direct relationship between congestion in the lower Federal courts and age of judges.

President Roosevelt in his message to Congress recommending his judicial revamping program, which would enable him to name six new justices to the Supreme Court, sought to justify his proposal on the ground that there was a direct relationship between congestion of court dockets and judges over 70 years of age. There is no congestion in the Supreme Court and in the 34 out of 85 Federal district courts where congestion exists there are only four judges over 70 years of age, The Washington Post survey of last week showed.

Justices' Actions Listed.

Examination of the work of the present Supreme Court justices, in addition to shedding light on their industry, also revealed a number of other interesting facts about the present tribunal. One such fact was that every member of the present Supreme Court has concurred in declaring unconstitutional 10 or more provisions of Federal enactments.

Thus, according to tabulations just made by Wilfred C. Gilbert, of the legislative reference service of the Congressional Library, Justice Louis D. Brandeis has participated in 35 decisions declaring Congressional enactments invalid and dissented in 21, leaving him as having concurred in 14. He wrote the opinions in two of these cases, both of which, incidentally, concerned laws passed since President Roosevelt entered the White House.

The Gilbert tabulation has Justice Harlan F. Stone participating in 22 cases declaring Federal laws unconstitutional and dissenting in 10 of them, leaving him concurring in 12 such decisions, in none of which he wrote the court's opinion. Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo has participated in 14 cases declaring Federal laws unconstitutional, in which he entered four dissents. Thus he concurred in 10 of those rulings and wrote the court's invalidating opinion in one of them—the New Deal savings and loan association case.

Longer Period on Bench.

The other members of the court have concurred in a far larger number of cases finding Federal provisions of law unconstitutional than have these three so-called liberal members of the Supreme Court. The greater number is due in some cases to a longer period on the bench.

Thus Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes is credited with having concurred in 19 out of 22 such cases in which he participated, having written the courts' opinion in five of them—including three New Deal acts. Six of the cases in which he concurred came up when he was an associate justice from 1910 to 1916.

Justice Willis Van Devanter, who in recent years has the lightest record for the number of opinions he has written, holds, however, the record for the entire history of the

A. F. of L. Action.

By Robert C. Albright.

Labor's Non-Partisan League, political worker organization in which John L. Lewis plays a dominant role, opened its campaign for the President's court plan yesterday with individual warnings to members of Congress, as President Roosevelt explained his plan to another group of non-committal Senators.

Senatorial opposition ranks apparently held firm in the face of developments, expecting new hostile commitments over the weekend. The three Senators called to the White House yesterday were reported inclining against any enlargement in the Supreme Court.

Sent to Congressmen.

The President told Senators yesterday virtually his entire economic and social program would be blocked unless his judiciary proposals are approved intact by Congress, it was learned in a reliable quarter. He continued unyieldingly opposed to compromise.

Labor's Non-Partisan League's letter to every member of Congress yesterday, signed by E. L. Oliver, executive vice president, took a similar view.

"No significant legal protection for labor's right to organize and bargain collectively, no regulation of minimum wages, no general shortening of hours of work is possible, on either a State or national basis, without reformation of the Federal judiciary," the letter stated.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt, forwarding to Congress his message on Federal crop insurance, again emphasized that "our form of Government" does not bar action for the general welfare.

He told members in his message that "because economic and social reforms of this character are essentially National in scope and in administration, the citizens of our Nation believe that our form of government was never intended to prohibit their accomplishment."

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins at a press conference later said he didn't "want to be an old gray man when these things are done." Hopkins said he is for the President's proposal and considered it "of vital importance to poor people all over the country."

Demands Support.

The league, headed by Maj. George L. Berry, President Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, and Sidney Hillman, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, served notice it "will confidently expect every progressive and liberal member of the House and Senate—every man who, in soliciting votes at the last election sincerely claimed to be a supporter of the President—will back his plan for judicial reform."

Five veteran Senate liberal leaders already have criticized the President's plan, and a sixth, Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, is expected to come out against it on Sunday.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, liberal Montana Democrat, who not only opposed the court plan but with Senator Homer T. Bone, Washington Democrat, drafted an alternative Constitutional amendment, will broadcast his stand in a radio speech tonight.

Labor's support of the President's plan, manifest both in the league's campaign and in the American Federation of Labor's executive council action on Wednesday, had reflected itself materially yesterday in Congressional mail, which continued to run heavily against the judiciary program.

Supporters of the program were banking strongly on an influx of resolutions and letters from local labor groups expected to start in the next week, but the opposition camp cautiously discounted the effectiveness of the labor stand.

One Progressive Democrat, who declined to be quoted, said he believed American Federation of Labor President William Green's support would be "half-hearted," and thought worker influence had been damaged by the Green-Lewis split, and developments attending the automobile strike.

Called to White House.

Three Senators called to the White House in one group yesterday were A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey; Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut, and Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, all Democrats.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, recently known to be seeking a compromise, and Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, wholeheartedly in favor of the President's plan, later lunched with the President.

Senators in neither group would say what took place, but it was reported none of the first three had changed his views. Moore, Maloney and Brown from the start have been listed as uncommitted. But colleagues of Moore and Maloney have said they are opposed strongly to any court enlargement. Brown, in a statement, said that while he was keeping "his mind

Best-Dressed Men In Nation Topped By 'Tony' Biddle

Philadelphia, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., United States Minister to Norway, leads the list of "the 10 best-dressed prominent American men," the National Association of Merchant Tailors announced tonight.

In another poll conducted at the same time, the association picked Clark Gable as the best-dressed man in Hollywood.

'Lo, the Poor Alien' Played By House Cast

By Sidney Olson.

Closing a successful two-day engagement, the House Immigration Committee presented a melodramatic tear-jerker yesterday entitled "Are Aliens People, Or What Would Hollywood Be Without Garbo?" to a rapt audience of five committee members, six reporters, a photographer (asleep) and assorted lawyers.

The entire cast was brilliant. Chairman Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), New York, was particularly good as the "chairman," chewing cigars nervously, barking questions swiftly and occasionally relaxing to munch one of the peppermints offered by Representative Charles Kramer (Democrat), California.

The theme of the play, while difficult for the audience to understand at times, seems to be that the "chairman" is holding "hearings" on a new "bill," which would bar foreign stage and screen stars from this country.

All scenes were laid around a huge green baize-covered table in Room 445, Old House Office Building, with chairs set for 22 members but only five present. The play is a tragedy, and each scene stresses a different aspect. There was no shooting yesterday, except when several lawyers shot their cuffs, but each actor in the drama acted as a one-man Greek chorus to tell the committee what a tragedy the bill would be (1) if it were enacted; (2) it it were not enacted.

First, Jean Hersholt, beloved char-

Sends Wallace Committee's Report to Congress as Basis for Bill.

A potentially vast system of crop insurance to guard against disaster in times of inadequate farm production was recommended to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

With his message the President sent the report of a special committee, headed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, which he appointed last September to study the problem. The committee made its report in December.

Creating a reserve in good crop years for the purpose of preventing privation in lean seasons and to stabilize prices year after year, the system is intended to apply first to the Nation's 1938 wheat production. Later it would be applied to other crops.

The plan would protect a farmer up to 75 per cent of a normal crop. He would pay insurance premiums in wheat, such payments creating the reserve with which the shock of crop failures would be cushioned. His return, in poor seasons, would come in either wheat or money.

$615,973,000 For Relief.

The Government has paid out, in the past 10 years, $615,973,000 for agricultural relief, the President's committee pointed out, a drain that was held to justify expenditures necessary to inaugurate and administer the crop insurance program which is designed to eliminate the necessity for such relief.

While Senator Pope, Democrat, of Idaho, already has pending a bill authorizing expenditure of $100,000,000 to finance the plan, other

Young Roosevelt Will Matriculate At U. of Virginia

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., son of the President, will enter the University of Virginia law school next fall, according to Eugene du Pont, 3d., who entertained his sister, Miss Ethel du Pont, and young Roosevelt at a cocktail party at his Richmond, Va., home yesterday.

Roosevelt and Miss Du Pont, his fiancee, drove yesterday to Charlottesville where they visited the university. The pair accompanied by Mrs. Eugene du Pont, jr., Miss Du Pont's mother, arrived at Richmond from Florida Wednesday. They will go to the Du Pont home at Greenville, Del., today.

Basin Chosen As Jefferson Memorial Site

Non-Utilitarian Temple to Be Marble, Says Committee.

Cenotaph to Cost Three Million Dollars; Pope Is Architect.

Climaxing 11 weeks of controversy over both the character and location of the structure, a Congressional commission yesterday decided that the memorial to Thomas Jefferson shall be an imposing temple of marble rising out of the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park.

The 12-man group, headed by Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York, making public its final action, announced:

That the architect for the project will be John Russell Pope, of New York, who also designed the classical art gallery which will house the famous Mellon connection.

That the memorial, for which Congress has authorized the expenditure of $3,000,000 will be based on the design of the Pantheon in Rome.

That the National Park Service of the Interior Department will act as executive agent of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, supervising construction and otherwise handling the details of construction, subject to the commission's approval.

Decision Unanimous.

In a formal typewritten announcement released at the conclusion of the meeting, Chairman Boylan said the site on the south axis of the White House had been selected unanimously.

"The decision of the committee today," it read, "insures that the construction of the memorial will be commenced in the near future."

Elaborating later on the statement, Boylan declared his group has submitted to the Budget Bureau, for insertion in the next deficiency bill, an item for $1,500,000 to allow work to be started immediately.

Asked whether the Army Engineering Office has approved the plans, Boylan replied cryptically: "Everything has been arranged satisfactorily."

Much to Be Filled In.

The Pope plan fills in a large portion of the basin and alters its contour considerably. Though used extensively for recreational purposes, the primary function of the man-made lake is to flush Washington Channel, which is under control of the Army Engineer for this district.

Jurisdiction of the Tidal Basin, whose hundreds of Japanese cherry trees will have to be radically reformed, is maintained by the Office of National Capital Parks, local unit of the National Park Service.

Union Officers Former 'Spies,' Senators Hear

By the Associated Press.

A "reformed" undercover man told Senate investigators yesterday that "all the officers of the United Automobile Workers' Union in Lansing, Mich., were once on the pay roll of the Pinkerton Detective Agency—then operating a far-flung espionage system for General Motors Corporation.

Lawrence Barker, one-time operative, said agency officials had instructed him to vote against President Roosevelt and to fight the Committee for Industrial Organization, sponsor of the recent General Motors strike.

Resulted in Killing Union.

He served as vice president of the Lansing union.

His fellow officers—President Carroll Trotter, Corresponding Secretary Clyde Cook, Financial Secretary Thomas Regan and Treasurer Clyde Mulligan—also were Pinkerton informants.

Spying was "very effective" in killing the union. Once numbering "nearly 100 per cent" of the Body of Man Found Frozen Resembles Mattson Kidnaper

By the Associated Press.

Quincy, Calif., Feb. 18.—Spectators said a startling resemblance to description of the Mattson kidnaper was disclosed today when a Federal agent trimmed the heavy beard from the face of a man whose frozen body was found in a freight car here.

The agent who identified himself as H. A. Smith, of the San Francisco office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, declined to comment on the resemblance.

Spectators in the office of Coroner John F. Moody declared, however, there was a remarkable similarity of the face, with its broken nose, to the drawing of the kidnaper as prepared by Federal agents.

Officers were informed the car was shunted onto a setback at Portola, Calif., January 14. That was three days after the battered body of the Mattson boy, whose abductor demanded $28,000 ransom, was found frozen in the snow near Everett, Wash.

Alexandrian and Five Others Killed, Ten Hurt in Explosion On U. S. Battleship Wyoming

Falls Church Man Gravely Injured

Victims Rushed to Port; Court of Inquiry May Sit Today.

By the Associated Press.

San Pedro, Calif., Feb. 18.—An exploding 5-inch gun manned by Marines killed six men and injured 10 aboard the demilitarized battleship Wyoming today—injecting reality of war into peacetime fleet maneuvers.

The explosion occurred during the culminating phase of the four-day, sea and land fighting in which 3,700 Marines, 750 Army troops and a dozen Naval vessels engaged at San Clemente Island, 60 miles offshore.

Among those killed was Capt. Edward J. Trumble, U. S. Marine Corps, attached to the Wyoming, who apparently was directing the gunfire aboard the oldest battleship now in use by the Navy. Capt. Trumble's home was in Alexandria, Va.

Victims Listed.

Seriously injured: Sydney Ensley, Atlantic City; William Keenan Webster, Greenwich, Conn.; Richard Parker Brooks, Mount Gilead, Ohio; David Roger Williams, Burgen, N. C.; Arnold Byrd, East Falls Church, Va.; David Joseph Roche, New York City.

Slightly injured: James Owen Holland, Brewton, Ala.; Robert Edwin Kennedy, Jacksonville, Fla.; William Henry Lentz, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Norman John Schluet, Chicago.

Ensley suffered a fracture of the right forearm and lacerations. Webster's right shoulder was amputated, it was announced. Extent of the injuries of the other casualties was not stated.

Chaplain F. W. Meehling, aboard the U. S. S. Colorado, was called to the hospital ship Relief after removal of the injured to that vessel and administered last rites of the Catholic Church to two of them.

He said five other men were operated upon aboard the Relief.

The dead and injured were members of the Marine Corps gun crew serving a 5-inch gun on the starboard side of the Wyoming, it was stated by a member of the staff of Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn aboard the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, fleet flagship.

Blast During Loading.

The 5-inch shell exploded while being loaded into the breech of the gun.

Immediately after the explosion, Capt. Charles Nelson Inkamp, commander of the Wyoming, notified Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, commander of the training squadron aboard the U. S. S. New York.

The Wyoming was ordered to drop out of the maneuvers and proceed to this port, where it arrived at 3:10 p. m. (6:10 p. m. E. S. T.) and anchored behind the breakwater. The flagship Pennsylvania, which had accompanied the Wyoming to port, anchored nearby.

It was announced a naval court of inquiry will be named, probably by Admiral Brown, and will sit aboard the Wyoming, perhaps tomorrow.

The Wyoming, commissioned in 1912 and demilitarized in 1930, came to the Pacific Coast January 25 with officers and men of the First Brigade of Marines to participate in the secret fleet landing exercise.

Covering Marines.

The tragedy occurred at 11 o'clock this morning (2 p. m. E. S. T.).

It was reported the Wyoming was firing its guns as a covering for the marines, who were landing in small boats from this and a marine transport, the Antares, to dash through the surf in a landing operation.

Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, commander in chief of the fleet, radioed the following information

"At about 11.00 (11 a. m., P. S. T.) today during exercises off San Clemente, a casualty to a 5-inch gun occurred on the Wyoming.

"Six dead, ten injured. The Wyoming is arriving at San Pedro at about 15.30 (3:30 p. m., P. S. T.—6:30 p. m., E. S. T.).

Huge Re-armament Will Prevent Aggression, Prime Minister Says; Committees Formed to Report on Raw Materials, Unify Defense.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 18.—Britain's giant rearmament program passed its first legislative hurdle tonight after Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin told the House of Commons the plan was designed "to put ourselves in a position to deter aggression."

The House passed by a vote of 329 to 145 a resolution authorizing the Government to borrow up to £400,000,000 ($2,000,000,000) in the next five years for the defense scheme, which calls for expenditure of $7,500,000,000.

The vote ended a two-day debate in which the opposition sharply criticized the plan and the statements by Government leaders in its defense.

Reaffirming Great Britain's faith in the League of Nations the prime minister charged the opposition was exaggerating purposely the increase in the army and navy.

"A great expense of this program is in the air, where it is being expended, I believe, with the consent of the whole nation," he said amid tumultuous cheers.

Laborite Sir Stafford Cripps earlier, in a biting criticism of the plan, charged, "We're witnessing the most magnificent subscription to a world suicide pact yet made public in any country in the world."

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's frequent references to collective security, he declared, had no object but to deceive the people.

The Prime Minister, in a reply designed to prove that the present

New York, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—Blonde Peggy Garcia, former Harlem hatcheck girl who got her name from a cigar advertisement, today described Dave Rubinoff, high-salaried radio violinist, as a "hot-and-cold Romeo" who fiddled while the blonde burned.

The little girl from Roanoke, Va., who said she came to the city full of hope and innocence six years ago, told a jury of two supposed meetings with the baldish, bespectacled radio star in a Philadelphia Hotel and his New York apartment. She is suing Rubinoff for $500,000 to patch her allegedly bruised heart.

It was after the meetings, she said, that Rubinoff's affections went up and down like a broken thermometer, until he finally began avoiding her.

Suicide of Son Again Puts Out Veteran's 'Eyes'

William Harry Phillips, 16, for years the "eyes" of his father, Billy Phillips, blind owner and operator of the news and periodical stand at the General Accounting Office, committed suicide, police said, by inhaling gas at his home, 221 F street northwest, yesterday.

His body was found on the kitchen floor by his mother, Mrs. Blanche Phillips, and Bartimus Jones, the colored janitor, after they had forced open the door. Police said the youth had taken a rubber tube, inserted it in the open gas jet of the kitchen stove, placed a paper bag over his head and apparently waited for death. The fire rescue squad failed to revive him, and a Casualty Hospital physician pronounced him dead.

The boy's father was wounded while he served as a motorcycle courier with the Air Corps in France during the World War. His wounds brought on blindness as his son grew up, and when sight was entirely gone, the youngster had become his father's boon companion.

Each day he led his father to the stand at the Accounting Office, and each night he led him home, through busy traffic. He took Phillips to the meetings of various veterans' organizations to which he belonged.

Last night "Billy" Phillips missed the meeting of National Capital Post, No. 2, Disabled American Veterans, of which he was an officer, for the first time.

Bill to Repeal Red Rider Sent To Conference

By James D. Secrest.

The "red rider" repeal bill was sent to conference late yesterday by the House in quiet contrast to the objections raised on Wednesday when a similar unanimous consent request was made.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, asked for the conference. Conferees named are Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, Kennedy, and Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri.

Mrs. Norton Absent.

Although Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, was on the floor when Kennedy asked for the conference, he made no move to block it. On Wednesday he raised an objection after Mrs. Norton declined to say whether or not she was committed to outright repeal.

Mrs. Norton was not on the floor when the conference was authorized. Neither was Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, author of the "pink rider" voted by the House and rejected by the Senate.

Nation's Chief Seeks to Speed Naval Program

British Plan May Cause More U. S. Construction, Walsh Asserts.

By William V. Nessly.

Great Britain's announcement of her new $7,500,000,000 defense program was followed here by quick developments yesterday.

President Roosevelt initiated a drive to speed up lagging construction work in the Nation's navy yards, and Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee declared that if the British expansion program is continued "it will be necessary for us to adopt a new naval program."

McGrady, Edison to Confer.

The President called to the White House Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, for a conference on ways of expediting Navy construction operations and asked the Assistant Secretary to look over the Navy yards with that objective. Out of the speed-up drive may come a new set of construction tactics that will sacrifice, so far as some of the new ships are concerned, some of the latest improvements in construction and devices for speed in building.

Meanwhile the apparent impasse over failure of steel companies to bid on Navy steel orders remained unbroken. Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, returned yesterday from Boston, and Edison said he would confer with him in the next few days on the possibility of overcoming the obstacle raised by the Walsh-Healey act, which would require steel companies to maintain a 40-hour week while working on Government orders. Steel officials contend they cannot upset their production schedule in order to produce the comparatively small orders for the Navy.

No Race, Walsh Says.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, speaking of the $7,500,000,000 British program, which includes three new battleships, urged "close observation of British naval movements, as well as those of other powers." Great Britain laid the keels for two new battleships on January 1, upon expiration of both the Washington and London naval limitation treaties, and President Roosevelt promptly announced this country would build two more.

Congress authorized construction of the battleships last year, work to be undertaken whenever the President should learn any other treaty power was building beyond old treaty limits. Senator Walsh said he did not believe Britain's decision to build three new battleships, seven cruisers and two airplane carriers immediately "calls upon us to engage in a naval shipbuilding race."

"It does call to the attention of our country," he said, "the importance of a navy and puts our Gov-

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 18.—Mary Astor, fiery-haired movie actress, and Manuel Martinez del Campo, young Mexican society man, were in complete agreement tonight as to whether they were man and wife.

Del Campo, socially prominent Mexican sportsman, recanted his previous denials tonight and admitted he and the film actress were married.

It all started early today in Yuma, Ariz., when Anna Malloy, deputy clerk, issued a marriage license to a Lucille Thorpe, 30, and a Manuel Martinez del Campo, 24 And then, at about 4:30 a. m., Judge Henry C. Kelly married the couple Miss Astor's true name is Lucille Langhanke Hawks Thorpe.

Judge Kelly said he did not know if the Lucille Thorpe he married to Martinez del Campo was Mary Astor, of the movies. "I don't go to the movies," he said.

Mass. Capitol Is Set in Uproar By Child Labor

Civic Leaders, Communists Mingle as State House Is Picketed.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb. 18.—The usually staid Massachusetts Capitol was thrown into an uproar today when supporters of a Federal child labor amendment, irate at the conduct of a legislative hearing, stormed from the committee room, picketed the State House and finally arranged for a mass meeting on Boston common tomorrow.

For three hours, scores of picketers chanted "pass the child labor amendment" as they marched slowly before the main entrance to the Capitol, which faces the historic common.

Socially prominent Boston women, students from nearby universities and representatives of organized labor mingled with Socialist and Communist Party representatives in the picket line.

30,000 to Turn Out.

The picketing broke up when Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, of Boston, granted the picketers a permit for a mass meeting on the Common tomorrow. Organized labor leaders claimed 30,000 would turn out for tomorrow's meeting.

Gov. Charles F. Hurley, opponent of ratification, was "too busy" to see a pickets' committee that called at his office protesting the treatment before the legislative committee.

The trouble broke out when State Senator John D. Mackay, presiding at the hearing on ratification of the amendment, informed sponsors of the bill that he would break into their presentation to hear opponents for one hour and then end the meeting with a hearing by proponents for one hour.

Policemen Called.

Jumping to his feet in protest, Kenneth I. Taylor, legislative agent for the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, denounced the procedure as irregular. At this, Mackay, Canadian-born 64-year-old lawyer, ordered Taylor to his seat. When Taylor continued to protest, Mackay called policemen to oust the labor leader.

At this Taylor cried out, "Those in favor of the amendment walk out!" and amid an uproar nearly 100 persons quit the auditorium and formed a picket line outside.

Edward K. Wheeler, Harvard law school student and son of United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, was in the picket line. Another was Miss Alice L. Dodge, member of a family which made a fortune in the automobile industry.

New Faces in Congress

REPRESENTATIVE EDWARD L. O'NEILL

By Liam Lenihan.

Thirty-three-year-old Leo O'Neill is unmarried, but he has a weather eye out for a mate.

At least he said so yesterday, snub nose all a wrinkle and a twinkle in his laughing Irish eyes.

But the freshman Representative from the Eleventh District of New Jersey can be serious too, though he never loses his sense of proportion.

Born July 10, 1903, O'Neill joined the Navy at 15 and saw the world with a vengeance. He served two years in Asiatic waters and was a member of the force that landed in Siberia.

Demobilized after four years of service, O'Neill became newspaperman and mercantile investigator consecutively before he entered politics at 21 as a district leader.

"I cast a split ticket on my first vote," he commented yesterday. "It was a gesture that reflected my balloting actions many times since."

O'Neill lost on a close decision in his first bid for Congress. He was renominated last year and in November he swamped the 14 years-entrenched Republican opposition by 6,000.

He likes it here; likes his job too. Calls it "interesting and exciting." His principal hobby is to make friends—and, incidentally, votes—but his special interest is housing legislation. He was associated with the Federal Housing Administration for the two years prior to his election and already has been heard from in committee hearings.

His greatest thrill—and recognition—will come next Monday when he will read Gen. Washington's farewell address in the House. He was selected by Speaker Bankhead for this role and he told about it with all the enthusiasm of a schoolboy.

Though loath to talk about himself, O'Neill bubbled over in an unsolicited testimonial to "Harry" Moore. He thinks the New Jersey Senator is "a great guy" and he held him up as a model for all aspiring toga wearers.

Since his arrival here he has given the folks back home something to talk about. He brought his mother here for the White House reception to Congress and now she is the pride and envy of Newark town.

2,000 Young Pilgrims Here As Lobbyists

Delegation Urges Passage of American Youth Act; Parade Planned.

Pilgrim's Progress, modern style, will reach the end of its first chapter in Washington today when more than 2,000 young men and women descend upon the city from virtually every section of the United States.

"It's positively the first official pilgrimage of youth ever to come to the Capital," said Abbott Simon, pridefully and positively. Simon is legislative chairman—lobbyist, if you please—for the American Youth Congress, which is sponsoring this youthful Amreican Odyssey. The purpose, he said in effect, is to make Senators and Representatives youth-conscious, with the hope they will pass the American youth act bill, recently introduced in Congress by Senator Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, and Representatives Jerry Voorhis, of California, and Maury Maverick, of Texas.

Register at Meetinghouse.

Coming to Washington a-foot, a-train and a-truck, the Youth delegates wil register this morning at the Friends' Meetinghouse, 2111 Florida avenue, and then head toward Capitol Hill to visit Congress. Armed with petitions bearing the signatures of thousands of young people through the country, urging the passage of the American youth act, a Youth delegation will be received by President Roosevelt at the White House at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

The petition, bearing the indorsement of 2,500,000 young people, state:

"Because it is essential that the 5,000,000 to 8,000,000 youth in the country be permitted either to finish their education or be given constructive employment, we, the undersigned, demand prompt passage of the American youth act, which provides:

1. A system of vocational training and employment on public enterprises for the purpose of providing work at trade-union wages for youth between the ages of 16 and 25.

2. For the aid of needy students—high school, vocational, undergraduate and graduate college students.

3. For the Democratic Administration of the act by local commissions composed of representatives of youth, trade unions, social service and educational and consumer organizations."

Congressmen to Talk.

Senator Lundeen, Representatives Voorhis and Maverick and Representative John M. Coffee, of Washington, who is also strongly supporting the American youth bill, will address the pilgrimage participants in the Labor Department auditorium tonight at 8:30 o'clock. The program will also include messages from leaders of important national youth organizations, including Harold Peterson, of the Junior Farmer Labor Association, a member of the Minnesota State Legislature, sent to the pilgrimage as a personal representative of Gov. Elmer Benson; William W. Hinckley, national chairman of the American Youth Congress; Rose Terlin, national student secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Edward Mitchell, of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union; Dorothy Detzer, of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom; Edward Strong, chairman of the National Negro Congress, and Prof. E. Franklin Frazier, of Howard University.

Tomorrow from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., the young people participating in the pilgrimage will march from the Capitol to the White House along Pennsylvania avenue. The parade will include members of organizations belonging to the American Youth Congress.

To Gather at Monument.

The feature of Sunday's program will be a gathering in the morning at the Washington Monument, where an interdenominational religious service will be held in commemoration of Washington's Birthday. The pilgrimage will progress through Monday. By that time, Youth Congress officials believe Senators and Representatives will see the wisdom of "doing something for young men and women" to the tune of passing the American youth act, which calls for an immediate appropriation of $500,000,000. This, as the Youth Congress sees it, is the modern pilgrim's only hope of escaping from the slough of depression, of ridding himself of the burden of unemployment, of reaching the Celestial City, where jobs and educational opportunities abound.

The President's Message

Text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress recommending adoption of a crop insurance program:

During the past four years the Government has assisted farmers in meeting emergencies of two different types. The first was the collapse of prices resulting from huge surpluses for which foreign markets had disappeared. The second was widespread failure of corps resulting from drought.

Government action helped both farmers and consumers. Meanwhile again it has been shown that neither producers nor consumers are benefited by wide fluctuations in either prices or supplies of farm products.

Convinced that the time has come to take permanent steps to protect farmers and consumers against disasters of both types, I appointed, on September 19 last, a committee of representatives of Federal agencies and requested this committee to prepare a report and recommendations for legislation providing a plan of "all-risk" crop insurance.

The committee has now completed its work and I transmit to you its report, entitled "Report and Recommendations of the President's Committee on Crop Insurance." I have examined this report and I am convinced that the plan it outlines is practical, socially desirable and worthy of your thoughtful consideration.

I believe that it provides an adequate basis for legislation which will make possible a program of crop insurance applying to wheat for the crop year 1938. I believe that legislation should authorize application of similar programs to other commodities when it is established that producers desire them and application of the plan to wheat has provided a back log of experience in applying the principles of crop insurance.

Crop insurance and a system of storage reserves should operate so that surpluses in years of good weather might be carried over for use in years of unfavorable growing conditions. Crop insurance and a system of storage reserves would help to protect the income of individual farmers against the hazards of crop failure; it would help to protect consumers against shortages of food supplies and against extremes of prices, and finally, it would assist in providing a more nearly even flow of farm supplies, thus stabilizing farm buying power and contributing to the security of business and employment.

The Government also has a special interest in measures which would assist in guarding farmers and consumers against emergencies arising out of extremes of surpluses or shortages. The expense in the past to Federal, State and local governments arising by reason of crop losses points to the desirability of employing the principle of insurance in order to lessen the cost—financial and human—of future crop disasters.

A program of crop insurance and storage of reserves should be part of the foundation of agricultural policy which we are building and which must include the conservation of soil and water, better land use, increased farm income and alleviation of distress in rural areas arising out of factors beyond the control of individual producers.

May I repeat what I have suggested in a former message: That because economic and social reforms of this character are essentially national in scope and in administration, the citizens of our Nation believe that our form of Government was never intended to prohibit their accomplishment.

officials estimated as much as $150,000,000 might be necessary.

The Wallace committee had said the program was "too large an undertaking for private companies."

Under the plan, a farmer would apply at seeding time for insurance against drought, floods, hail, grasshoppers and other hazards. A local county committee would check his acreage, determine the normal yield, fix the amount of insurance the farmer could carry and the amount of the premiums he must pay.

Premiums would be paid in years when the yield was above normal. A farmer might pay several years' premiums in a single good season. In a bad year, if he should lose his entire crop and the normal yield was 12 bushels an acre he would receive insurance up to 9 bushels an acre, the payment being made from the reserve built up from the good year premiums.

Chairman Marvis Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, said his committee first would consider the pending farm tenancy message, next the bill to continue for two years Federal benefit payments to farmers, then the crop insurance measure.

The farm tenancy bill, introduced by Jones, was the subject, meanwhile, of a spirited debate at a hearing before Jones' committee.

Secretary Wallace, who was a witness, favors Government retention for 20 years of title to the land sold to tenant farmers. Jones' bill, however, would convey conditional title to the buyer when 25 per cent of the purchase price has been paid and complete title as soon as the full sum had been paid.

Wallace contended that the tenant would soon sell the land if he was given full title and would then be back in the ranks of tenants.

The bill authorizes expenditures of $500,000,000 in the next ten years for the purpose of buying land that would be resold to tenant farmers.

Wallace suggested that it be revised to include provisions for "rehabilitation loans" and other Administration-favored items, and was asked by Jones to report later on the probable increased cost.

On the Senate side, however, Senator Pope, chairman of a subcommittee appointed to consider the insurance project, said his group would open hearings on it within a week.

Mexican Smuggler Is Killed In Battle With Federal Agents

U. S. Border Patrol Surprises Group Crossing Rio Grande Near El Paso; Two Others Wounded; Contraband Confiscated.

A running gun battle between Federal border patrol agents and Mexican liquor smugglers, in which one of the latter was slain, was reported late yesterday by the Treasury Department.

Four agents surprised five smugglers early yesterday on the banks of the Rio Grande near San Elizario, Tex., in the vicinity of El Paso, Secretary Morgenthau was informed.

The outlaws opened fire, which was returned by the Federal men. An unidentified runner was killed. A confederate, who gave Miguel G. Santacruz as his name, was seriously wounded. The patrolmen reported they believed one of the three who escaped also was shot.

A large quantity of contraband liquor and one shotgun were confiscated, the Treasury announced.

In the absence of reports to the contrary, it was believed that none of the four customs officers was wounded.

The engagement was one of the most thrilling that have occurred since the recent reorganization of the Treasury's border patrol system. The agents, now under the customs agency service of the Bureau of Customs, formerly were part of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

18 American-Made Planes Dedicated To China Salvation

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, Feb. 18.—Four winsome daughters of Nanking officials broke bottles of wine on 18 American-made pursuit planes today, dedicating them to the cause of "Chinese national salvation."

The additions to the Chinese aerial fighting forces—estimated to number between 300 and 400 first-class planes, most of them American-made—represent contributions from Chinese residing in 15 foreign nations on all the continents.

Here's the Modern Way

The 3 Minute VapoRub Massage

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest, and back (between and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

Almost before you finish rubbing, VapoRub starts to bring relief two ways at once—two direct ways:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose, throat, and chest. This combined poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation—eases the cough—helps break congestion.

Avoids Risk of Stomach Upsets

This safe, external treatment cannot possibly upset the stomach, as constant internal "dosing" is so apt to do. It can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

Here's me and the boys in Warehouse No. 2

Would you believe it, that letter I'm reading is from a party that's got the exact same name as me—Harry E. Wilken—only he lives way off in South Bend, Indiana. He says how he bought a bottle of Wilken Family Whiskey and found it first rate, and to please keep it that way. That's a mighty nice thing to say and we sure will keep our Family's Whiskey like it is!

Harry E. Wilken

Half a Million folks have sat down—and wrote in to us Wilkens!

This just goes to show how quick the Wilken Family Whiskey has took hold

Counting up all the mail our Family has got from folks telling us how real tasty they're all finding our Family's Whiskey, we make it just this side of half a million letters, post cards and things that come to our Family up here at the Maples.

When folks ask me how we make our Family's Whiskey so extra tasty, all I can say is this. It's the exact same whiskey as us distillers raised in the whiskey business enjoy ourselves.

All Pa Wilken's 40 odd years of experience, and Grandpa Wilken's experience on top of it—and everything that William and Tom and me got out of all our personal experience is in this Family's Recipe of ours. It makes us feel fine—the way you keep telling us how much you like our Family's Whiskey.

Site on Basin For Jefferson Temple Chosen

Utah—had been determinedly opposed to the Tidal Basin site.

Several days ago Boylan took the plans, as finally approved yesterday, to the White House, where they presumably were indorsed by President Roosevelt. A short time afterward the President declared he was in favor of a nonutilitarian memorial. Several members of Congress, Secretary Ickes and a number of civic leaders had expressed the hope earlier that an auditorium or some other practical structure be adopted as a memorial to the third President, and author of the Declaration of Independence.

Boylan said the sculptor of the heroic-size statue of Jefferson, which will be placed in the center of the rotunda, has not yet been chosen. The interior design by Pope depicts a standing figure mounted on a tall pedestal.

A description of the memorial, prepared by Pope and released by Boylan, says consideration was given Jefferson as a "statesman, a scholar, an architect, the third President of the United States, the drafter of the Declaration of Independence, an adviser on the drawing up of the Constitution and the founder of the University of Virginia," in drafting the plans.

L'Enfant Plan Developed.

It states that four of the five cardinal points of the L'Enfant plan, which Washington and Jefferson helped prepare, have been developed as envisaged by the Capital founders. They are now occupied by the Capitol, White House, Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial. The Jefferson Memorial would be the fifth.

Thus will be completed an architectural cross, with the White House, Monument and Jefferson Memorial on the north-south axis, and the Capitol, Monument and Lincoln Memorial on the east-west axis. The new project will be located at the spot where the north-south axis would intersect with Maryland avenue if that thoroughfare were extended into Potomac Park.

The same position relative to Pennsylvania avenue is occupied by the White House.

"Esthetic Leanings."

"In the conception of a logical and appropriate memorial to Thomas Jefferson," said the architect's report, "immediate consideration is given to the evidences of his esthetic leanings as shown in works executed under his direction and also in his writings and drawings."

These works indicated, it continues, that Jefferson was especially fond of those forms of classical architecture exemplified by the Pantheon in Rome and the Villa Rotunda near Vicenza. The former, circular and with a columned portico, "is a product of the greatest period of Roman classic architecture."

The inference is that Jefferson virtually designed his own memorial, which, like the Pantheon, also will be circular in form and be adorned with a colonnade."

Virginia Rotunda Cited.

"Jefferson's beautiful design of the rotunda as the head of his plan of the University of Virginia was inspired by his familiarity with ancient classic architecture as typified by the Pantheon," said the report.

"Its main approach is accented simply and adequately by the portico on and facing the White House axis. In the treatment of the interior of the building its classic prototype has again been utilized in a somewhat modified form to conform in spirit to a simpler era of which Jefferson was reputed to be the foremost and greatest exponent."

The Boylan commission, it is believed, trusts that this explanation of the direct Jefferson influence will pacify those critics who complained that a non-utilitarian mass of marble would not be in keeping with the character of a man whose tastes were simple and unostentatious.

The only absentee members at yesterday's meeting were Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, former Undersecretary of the Treasury and a descendant of the statesman to be honored, and Dr. George J. Ryan. They were represented by proxies.

Those present were Senators Lonergan, Thomas and McNary; Representatives Boylan, Culkin and Smith, of Virginia; Stuart G. Gibboney, Hollins S. Randolph, Joseph P. Tumulty and Dr. Fiske Kimball.

Dr. Niels Bohr, Interview-Proof, Gently Denies Toronto Report

Canada Lecture Heard by Audience, Physicist Says in Capital.

There must have been a mistake somewhere.

For Dr. Niels Bohr, one of the greatest living theoretical scientists, yesterday gave polite but firm denial to published dispatches saying no one heard the lecture he delivered in Toronto last week, though several hundred were in the hall.

Cornered in the lobby of the Wardman Park Hotel, the 1922 Nobel Prize winner in physics who has been termed positively "interview-proof" by Washington associates asserted gently that something surely must be wrong somewhere.

"Several persons told me afterward that they heard me distinctly," he said. "Those reports came to me as a big surprise."

Dr. Bohr spoke without anger or chagrin. Averse to "publicity" almost to the point of phobia, his chief concern at the moment was to join Mme. Bohr in the hotel dining room.

Hall's Acoustics Praised.

Poor acoustics and his Danish accent were blamed for the reported failure of his Toronto lecture on "Light and Life." But yesterday he had only words of praise for the hall's acoustics. And his accent gave further support to his denial.

A professor in the University of Copenhagen and a foremost physicist during the past 30 years, Dr. Bohr came here to attend the informal meeting of fellow theory-developers sponsored by George Washington University and the Carnegie Institution.

He said he was delighted with the conference, whose sessions he attended yesterday and Wednesday, and voiced his respect for the work being done by experimental and theoretical physicists in this country. Asked who he thought is the leading American physicist, he diplomatically declined to commit himself.

Third Trip to U. S.

Dr. Bohr said this is his third trip to the United States, the previous one being 14 years ago, shortly after the Nobel Prize was awarded to him. He did not, of course, mention the prize.

DR. NIELS BOHR.

Strongly remindful of his distinguished fellow in the realm of abstract science, Prof. Albert Einstein, with his far-away expression and absent-minded overtone, Dr. Bohr is on the far side of middle age.

In reply to a question, he said his interest lies in "atomic problems." He did not go on to explain that he is an international authority on this infinitesimal unit, that his theories on its structure are staggering in their complexity.

Leaves Capital Today.

Further quetions squeezed out the information that he is leaving the Capital today for the University of North Carolina, where he will attend another meeting of physicists, whence he will proceed to Berkeley, Calif., to deliver a series of lectures.

Another question was in the process of being framed when Mme. Bohr came up and reminded her distinguished husband that the afternoon session of the meeting began at 2 o'clock and they had not lunched (it was then past 1).

acter from Hollywood, recently successful as "The Country Doctor" with the Dionne quintuplets in the movies, told the committee the bill would have barred him if it had been law in 1912.

Hersholt, Danish-born, with glasses, a mustache and a venerable pipe, began to tell the committee he represented the Screen Actors Guild, which was opposed unanimously to the bill.

Here Dickstein, rising to great acting heights, cut off Hersholt's testimony pointblank and retired him to a seat.

The next appearance was that of Gabriel Hess, representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., who told the committee eight major companies employed 19,000 persons but only 61 of them are foreigners.

Then came Joseph Seidelman, foreign manager of Columbia Pictures, who predicted foreign countries would retaliate if the bill were enacted, thus destroying the valuable foreign market for American films.

That a "certain impressario" offered an American coloratura singer named Galli-Campi a job in the Metropolitan Opera in New York if he would deposit $30,000 in the Bank of Milan.

That she refused to do this and that Lily Pons got the job.

That Galli-Campi, who is managed by Freeman, is being discriminated against by the "arbitrary" management of the Metropolitan.

That "very possibly" Beniamino Gigli, former "Met" star, left the country recently because he was "tired of paying financial tribute to keep his job."

And so forth.

Frank Gilmore, of the Actors Equity Association, told the committee that while he favored the bill, it would be so drastic as to bar Paderewski if he wanted to come to New York for the World's Fair in 1939.

Then appeared a heavy-set gentleman in frock coat, wing collar and striped pants, the Gen. Samuel T. Ansell who once sued the late Huey Long for $500,000 for libel, following Ansell's investigation for the Senate of Louisiana elections.

Gen. Ansell, now appearing as counsel for the American Federation of Musicians, quoted Euripides and Sophocles to prove that "artists of all times have demanded their payment in advance." He didn't say what this proved, but added: "I speak with a prejudice because I, too, am an Episcopalian." This dramatic statement seemed to floor the committee, and Representative Caroline O'Day of New York, Democrat, who had been fanning herself resignedly, soon left the room.

Gen. Ansell then boomed that he was for the bill except that he wanted solo instrumentalists and orchestral conductors excluded, too. Inside of 30 seconds the committee had adjourned and the reporters we fighting their way out of the room with the story.

Rep. Shannon Is Questioned In Vote Frauds

Congressman Testifies in U. S. Inquiry of Election Conspiracy.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 18.—Trial of a second group of seven Kansas City election workers charged with vote fraud conspiracy opened late today in Federal court while a jury was considering the case of five defendants tried on similar charges.

In a third phase of the Government's inquiry into asserted wholesale vote frauds in the November general election here, a Federal grand jury questioned Representative Joseph B. Shannon, leader of a Kansas City Democratic faction, who returned voluntarily from Washington to answer a subpena.

In closing arguments of the first trial, Harry L. Jacobs, defense attorney, said Edson M. Walker, a Democratic precinct judge, "violated the laws of the State and of respectable citizens," but that he did not engage in a conspiracy as charged by the Government and so should be acquitted with the other defendants.

Judge Merrill E. Otis called a jury panel for the second trial a short time after he submitted the first case to a jury. As in the first trial, two defendants entered pleas of nolo contendre, or no defense. They are Callie Clark, Democratic judge, and Pearl Sperry, Republican leader.

The other defendants are Lorne E. Wells, Democratic judge; Frank H. Adams, Republican judge; Joe R. Wells, jr., Democratic clerk; Jonn A. Lutheran, Democratic precinct captain, and Leo B. Roach, police patrolman.

The defendants are charged with erasing cross-marks opposite the names of some Republican candidates and "falsely forging" cross-marks for Democratic candidates."

Basis Reached To Block New Motors Strike

Negotiators in Detroit Busy Settling Issues Raised in Former Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 18.—Negotiations for General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers reached an understanding which they expected would settle a new strike at the Fisher Body-Chevrolet plants in St. Louis tonight, and prepared to continue tomorrow their discussion of remaining issues in the widespread strikes which ended last week.

Although the St. Louis dispute interrupted the sixth session of the conferees, Wyndham Mortimer, first vice president of the union, said tonight a tentative agreement on machinery for the handling of grievances of union employes had been reached.

The union has asked for the establishment of a national tribunal.

Misunderstanding arising from the management's action in transferring some workers to run truck assemblies through the regular passenger car line in the St. Louis plants, Mortimer said, caused today's strike. He said a shortage of passenger car bodies caused the action and that the company was making every effort tonight to get materials into St. Louis, so that operations would return to normal tomorrow, with every worker back on his original job.

A new automotive sit-down strike here late today stopped an assembly line at the L. A. Young Spring & Wire Co., whose products include cushion springs for several automobile manufacturers, said the striking U. A. W. A. members had not presented any demands.

Troopers "Dig In."

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 18 (AP).—National Guard troops enforcing martial government of this automobile accessory city, a battleground of union and non-union labor, dug in tonight to remain at least through the week-end.

"We are going to stay until we feel sure that order can be maintained," said Col. Albert H. Whitcomb, commanding troops called out last Saturday following a shooting skirmish that left ten wounded.

Twenty military prisoners were ordered turned over to civil authorities for possible grand jury action. Col. Whitcomb said the transfer would be made "within a few days."

Victor Reuther, organizer for the United Automobile Workers of America, said all of the prisoners were union men. He asserted their detention was in violation of their constitutional rights.

Coal Wage Parley.

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Soft coal operators and miners settled down tonight for a long fight over terms for their next wage and hour agreement. Their agreement extends through March 31.

R. B. Harris Heads Security District

R. B. Harris, of Washington, yesterday was appointed head of a district office of the Social Security Board, it was announced by G. R. Parker, regional director.

Parker said 1,500 aged are receiving $38,000 a month aid here; 3,700 orphans under 16 receive $68,800; and 110 blind receive $2,700 a month.

Payments average considerably higher in the District than throughout the country. National average for dependent children is only $10.80; for the aged, $14.40; for the blind, $24.80. Parker explained the higher cost of living in cities accounts for the higher payments.

The new office will be at 1320 F street northwest, and will be one of several serving the District, Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Mary's counties in Maryland.

Bill to Repeal Red Rider Sent To Conference

Senate Committee on Education and Labor, said he did not know who the Senate conferees will be, but it is probable that they will be appointed today. One of them is expected to be Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the sub-committee which reported the Wheeler bill.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, is ranking minority member of the committee.

House proponents of outright repeal are encouraged by the promises of many members who supported the McCormack amendment to vote for repeal if they get another chance.

Will Transfer Support.

Mrs. Norton said that more than a score of members have told her that they are ready to transfer their support from the "pink rider" to the Senate bill.

As the Senate has twice passed a bill for outright repeal of the "red rider," its conferees are not expected to accept the House amendment. Consequently, the House will get another opportunity to vote on the issue, probably next week.

If the House again heeds Representative McCormack, however, and insists upon its amendment, a deadlock doubtless will occur and the "red rider" will remain on the statute books.

There is little likelihood that the "pink rider" will be enacted into law as Washington school officials have informed Senators that they would rather see the "red rider" remain than to accept the compromise.

Opposition Cited.

The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women and the District of Columbia League of Women Voters, meanwhile, stated they wished to call the attention of Congress to the long list of citizens' associations and religious groups which have gone on record favoring outright repeal of the rider.

The list also "refutes the statement by the citizens' committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations that this committee represents the citizens," the statement asserted.

Kalorama Citizens Association, Rock Creek Citizens Association, Hillcrest Citizens Association, Barry Farm Citizens Association, Northeast Boundary Citizens Association, Southwest Citizens Association, Forest Hills Citizens Association, Burleith Citizens Association, North Capitol Citizens Association, Washington Highlands Citizens Association, Chevy Chase Citizens Association, Midcity Citizens Association, Georgetown Citizens Association, Georgetown Citizens Association, Brookland Citizens Association, Trinidad Citizens Association, Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights, Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., and Friendship Citizens Association.

Drive Is Renewed On Trotzky Plot

Moscow, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia's dreaded secret police, the NKVD, successor to the OGPU and the Cheka, today renewed their drive on the alleged followers of Leon Trotzky, arch-enemy of Dictator Josef Stalin.

Mme. Zaks, a sister of the late Gregory Zinoviev, who was executed last August, was among those arrested. She was seized in Leningrad where she was head of a scientific research institute operated by the state. In the Far East the NKVD arrested "several" workers in the Sushan coal mine. The mines had not fulfilled their quota under the second five-year plan. Sabotage was suspected.

Liquor Salesman Faces Embezzlement Charge

Sam Wilner, 31, 1517 Thirty-fifth street northwest, was charged with embezzling $535 from the Maryland Distillery Products Corporation yesterday following his arrest by check squad detectives.

Wilner, a salesman for the firm, was named in a warrant sworn to by Joseph M. Rubin, 1427 I street northwest, the company's manager. The warrant accuses Wilner of having failed to turn into the company the money which he collected in payment for liquor sales.

Nation's Chief Seeks to Speed Naval Program

British Plan May Cause More U. S. Construction, Walsh Asserts.

ernment on notice as to what, if any, changes we should make in our building program."

Assistant Secretary Edison said his discussion with the President took up the Walsh-Healey act incidentally. For the most part it dealt with other causes of delay in navy yard work.

The fact that the destroyer and submarine construction program is far behind schedule has been emphasized in progress reports by the navy for months past. Various factors are involved, an important one being the frequent changes made in plans for vessels, after construction is begun, to incorporate latest developments and inventions.

Standardization Studied.

Edison said his study would include advisability of greater standardization to speed construction. He suggested that in the case of a project to build eight destroyers, the first two might be completed without change in plans. Then all new improvements or inventions could be worked into the next set of destroyers and the new ones be the model for the remainder of the program.

"It takes too long to build the ships now," he said. "And it is our desire to eliminate all the unnecessary causes of delay."

He said the President and he "briefly" mentioned the British program. To newspapermen he expressed the opinion Britain will be bidding in United States markets for supplies to carry out her program, and business here will be stimulated.

Advantage, Handicap Seen.

He saw in this British buying here both an advantage and a handicap to the United States program. Britain, he said, will be buying some of the supplies the United States Navy could use, but at the same time the increased business will result in setting up of better means of supplying all demands. He said he was not in a position to say what supplies the British will buy here, but that in "all that new business, we will get considerable backwash."

He emphasized no work has yet been stopped in any of the yards because of the Walsh-Healey act, repeating no lay-offs will be necessary before late March. He was still hopeful the act's obstacles could be surmounted and said he did not believe new legislation would be needed.

Asked if the Washington Navy Yard would be required to lay off men in case no solution is found before next month, he replied the local yard would be affected in a general way, as all the others are.

Union Officers Former 'Spies,' Senators Hear

Lansing workers, the membership dwindled until only the five officers were left.

Arthur Greer, United Automobile Workers' organizer, received pay from the Pinkerton Agency, which reputedly "built a $10,000 house for him."

Pinkerton operatives tapped the telephones of the union's Detroit office and of Homer Martin, international president.

Pinkerton officials in Detroit "smuggled away" and burned documents dealing with labor espionage which had been subpoenaed by the La Follette committee.

Barker told the committee he recently had disclosed his spying activities to the union, and that he now is a bona fide member.

Testimony Is Denied.

His testimony was denied in almost every detail by Robert Mason, assistant superintendent in Pinkerton's Detroit headquarters.

It was supported, however, by an affidavit by Barker's wife, Ceda, who said Mason had been a frequent visitor in her home.

Mason, following Barker to the witness stand, asserted that the former operative's testimony was "twisted" and "mostly untrue."

He denied Mrs. Barker's contention he had written "the contract and constitution for a rubber workers' union in Dayton," but acknowledged he "advised the man who did write them."

Mexican Admits He's Husband Of Mary Astor

He reached Mexico City late this afternoon in a denying mood.

"Deny everything," he fired at reporters.

Previously, he declared, "all those stories" about the wedding were untrue, that he had gone to Yuma only for a holiday, and that he had not the vaguest idea when he would return to the United States.

Miss Astor's version of the trip to Yuma coincided with his, for a short time in Hollywood today.

When she arrived, she feigned astonishment at the sight of newsmen and photographers.

"Married? Absolutely not. Nothing of the sort. I don't know anything about it. All I did was take a boy friend to the border. Sorry. Somebody gave you a bum steer."

An hour or so later, she did, a right-about on that story.

"Yes, I married Manuel there," she said. "I married him because I love him.

"We hoped to keep it a secret. He learned only yesterday of the death of his father. He has gone home to settle his estate. We were going to announce our marriage next month when he comes back."

No Delay in Yuma.

She insisted, however, that her original intention last night had been merely to put Del Campo aboard a southbound plane. Instead, they decided to go together and be married in Yuma, where, unlike California points, breathless lovers need not delay for three days after taking out a license.

Less than a year ago, she went to court to break an order by which her second husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, Hollywood surgeon, had obtained sole custody of their 4-year-old daughter, Marylyn. Dr. Thorpe won the award when he divorced Miss Astor. After a long and heated struggle the petition-hearing was settled out of court in a manner dividing Marylyn's life between the parents.

"Child Not Affected."

Miss Astor said today she did not believe her marriage to Del Campo would alter the status of her arrangement with Dr. Thorpe for custody of Marylyn. "And as to relations between the child and the new husband, she said "they get along beautifully."

Her first husband was Kenneth Hawks, movie director, who was killed in an airplane accident.

Britain Widens Plan to Include Raw Materials

Committees Will Report on Supplies Abroad and Unify Defense.

preparation was not inconsistent with the government's oft-stated foreign policy, repeated from a recent Eden speech:

"Our arms may, if occasion arose, be used in the defense of France and Belgium against unprovoked aggression. They may, and if a new Western Europe settlement can be reached they would be used in defense of Germany where she was a victim of unprovoked aggression."

The Prime Minister declared the government had not lost hope of achieving permanent peace through regional pacts, saying:

"I think it may well be in the immediate future that the most hopeful prospect is the prospect of a regional pact."

Security "Worth Anything."

"It is worth anything and everything in Europe to get a feeling of security at any rate in one part, from which that security, if once attained, may spread to other parts of Europe."

He did not specify what pacts were in prospect.

Defending the government's swing to favoring regional pacts, as against depending upon the League, Baldwin pointed out the League's task of collective security was almost insuperable with some of the world's most powerful nations outside its membership.

"The idea of collective security," he said, "was that there should be such an overwhelming force on one side that no aggressor could start.

"If any war breaks out in Europe now, it will run through Europe—the most terrible thing you can conceive. If the forces are fairly equal, you may have a repetition of 1914—with worse horrors.

"The time for sacrifice is now," he said.

"The best thing we can do now to preserve our spirit of freedom is to make our country strong so that no one who holds opposite views in these matters shall ever consider it worth their while making any wanton aggression against this country."

Inskip Speaks.

Sir Thomas Inskip, minister for co-ordination of defense, earlier announced in the debate the creation of a committee to report on purchasable foreign stocks of raw materials for war-time use.

A high government official explained "the purpose of the committee is to keep the Defense Department informed about supplies of essential materials available throughout the world."

Sir Thomas' defense of the government's program was attacked by Clement Attlee, Labor Party leader, in winding up the debate for the opposition.

"Every word in the speech of the minister of defense," he charged, "was directed not to the possibility, but to the certainty of war."

Tonight's vote in Commons was taken in committee and tomorrow the financial resolution will be reported formally from the committee and a bill introduced which the government planned to have Parliament adopt next week.

Sir Thomas, in his speech, also disclosed that a second committee had been organized to unify the defense plans of the army, navy and air force.

His brief announcement gave no details concerning the two groups. Sir Thomas said merely:

"Recently a joint intelligence committee has been formed from representatives of all three services, which works under the chiefs of staff, and we have also formed a committee of industrial intelligence relating to foreign countries.

"Questions of the higher command in the event of war are being exhaustively examined."

Answers Alexander.

Replying to the Laborite former first lord of the admiralty, A. V. Alexander, who charged that the armament program was a "profligate expenditure" which would unbalance the budget for five years and "reduce the standard of living of our people for a generation," Inskip said:

"The ultimate task of any government worthy of its name must be the task of making certain that no foreigner will prevail over us."

He said the Government's preparedness program included plans for control, distribution and rationing of food in war time; construction of Government munitions factories; diversion of shipping from the East to the West coast of England; preparation of the inland transport system, and choice of routes for movement of troops.

ABOUT GLASSES . . .

FITTING GLASSES . . .

In the early days spectacles were very expensive and only those of considerable wealth had them. This fact was not because they were of such excellent quality. They were considered more of a fashion than an aid to living. Glasses at that time were not sold or fitted according to the need of the wearer. They were fitted according to the age of the person. It was this practice that caused many thinking men to complain about them. How extremely fortunate we are today in having scientific examinations and manufacturing of spectacles. We should all take advantage of this opportunity.

Ex-Navy Officer Begins Battle For Open Trial

Farnsworth Charges He Was Betrayed Into Dropping Fight.

Charging he had been betrayed on promises which led him to drop his fight against charges of selling naval secrets to Japan, John S. Farnsworth, former lieutenant commander in the Navy, yesterday won permission to argue for an open trial in District Supreme Court next Tuesday.

In a penciled letter to Justice James M. Proctor, before whom he pleaded "nolo contendere" Monday, Farnsworth asked permission to change his plea to "not guilty."

He pleaded "nolo contendere," which means in effect, "I do not contest the Government's charges" after he had been subjected to "enormous pressure," Farnsworth declared. He said his decision was based on the flip of a coin after he had been assured that his case would be given only "routine publicity" and a second indictment against him would be nolle prossed.

Will Hear Arguments.

Justice Proctor announced he would treat Farnsworth's letter as a motion for a change of plea and would hear arguments on it Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Samuel F. Beach who summoned more than 50 witnesses from all parts of the country to appear against Farnsworth Monday announced he would strenuously oppose the motion for a change of plea.

Beach said the Government made no agreement with Farnsworth or his attorneys and it would be unfair and expensive for the Government to recall all of its witnesses for a trial.

Charges Promises Broken.

Farnsworth accused Beach of violating the promises he was given that his case would not receive any undue publicity by revealing evidence which would have been produced at the trial.

"My acquiescence in this plea (nolo contendere) was made on the grounds that by so doing I would protect those who are unfortunate enough at this moment to have me for a relative," declared Farnsworth in his letter to Judge Proctor.

Farnsworth revealed that he had requested the Attorney General to appoint a board comprising a naval officer, a jurist and a civilian to hear evidence against him in private session.

"If they decided I was guilty I would accept a maximum penalty without question," Farnsworth wrote. "That would be eminently a fit way to protect the dignity of the United States in this matter."

"Apparently such considerations are of no avail and for the very doubtful pleasure of subjecting myself and relatives, who have no earthly connection with this case, to great humiliation methods are being employed which force me to protect myself in the only way now left."

Arkansas Judge's Removal Is Asked

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 18.—A majority report of the House Committee investigating law enforcement conditions in Hot Springs and the eighteenth judicial district today recommended impeachment proceedings against Circuit Judge Earl Witt of the eighteenth district.

The report charged Witt with "high crimes and misdemeanors and gross misconduct."

The majority charged the judge had been observed in an intoxicated condition in his court, that he had knowledge of open gambling without taking action, and that he had neglected to ask the grand jury to investigate alleged election irregularities.

Sherman Stamp Protest by South Stimulates Sales

Protests of the Georgia and South Carolina State Legislatures against the new 3-cent Gen. Sherman stamps, "are great for sales," Roy M. North, of the Postoffice, said yesterday.

North, a Georgian himself, said the Postoffice was not taking sides in the Civil War, pointing out that next month the department will issue a stamp commemorating Robert E. Lee and "Stonewall" Jackson, revered Southern leaders.

Jewish Isolation Sought in Poland

Warsaw, Feb. 18 (AP).—Demands for segregation of Jews in Wilno spread beyond university circles today. Cab drivers petitioned the city government to divide Wilno into Christian and Jewish sections, with Jewish-operated cabs confined to the Jewish quarter.

The director of hospitals ordered Jewish patients placed in one municipal hospital and Christians in another. At the university, where anti-Jewish feeling has been strong, professors siding with non-Jewish students ordered Jews to occupy benches apart from others and do their laboratory work at different times.

An official announcement, at the same time, said Poland's new nationalist party, which is anti-Semitic, will explain its aims and principles in a program to be broadcast Sunday.

Social Worker Asks 'Humane' Relief System

By the Associated Press.

The American Association of Social Workers reported yesterday local and State relief has broken down badly in many sections since the Federal Government quit contributing to the dole.

Walter West, executive secretary, made public a survey which he said was based upon reports from 28 representative areas in as many States. In an accompanying statement he said:

"Insufficient funds available locally in many States has dictated a wholesale reduction of relief grants, the elimination of essential items from relief allowances, and harsh policies governing acceptance of applications, designed to make relief hard to get and difficult to endure."

Failure of the Federal works program to absorb all employable needy family heads has contributed to local difficulties, West said.

Emphasizing he was not attacking the WPA program as such, he added:

"Social workers support the ideal of a work program. Our point is that it is not and cannot be a covering program that can ever care for all of those in need who can work.

"The works program has absorbed a fraction of those in need, and has left an equally large group to the mercies of either inadequate or totally absent State and local facilities in many sections of the country."

He urged Federal grants-in-aid to the States for direct relief to "under-pin" the Federal works program and assist State and local governments to finance "a decent humane program of general assistance for those who cannot be cared for through a work program."

West expressed hope also President Roosevelt would appoint a non-partisan Federal commission to study the problem and help formulate a long-time solution.

4 States to Seek Dust Blizzard Aid

Guymon, Okla., Feb. 18 (AP).—Dust clouds blew in thinning billows over parts of the Southwest tonight as Oklahoma officials mobilized for war on a four-State front against crop-menacing "black blizzards."

Wallace Hughes, Guymon, State Representative, said Gov. E. W. Marland had called three conferences to seek Federal funds for battling dust in western Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle, southeastern Colorado and western Kansas.

Warring Pleads Not Guilty at Arraignment

Alleged Numbers Gambler Released in $2,000 Bond for Hearing.

Surrendered by his attorney, Emmett Robert Warring, 31, alleged by police to be Washington's "numbers" racket boss, pleaded not guilty to a charge of operating a lottery yesterday.

Wearing smoked glasses, Warring appeared in United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage's office with his lawyer, Harry T. Whelan. The warrant, sworn to by Detective Roy Blick, was served on the diminutive gambler by Chief Deputy Marshal Thomas E. Ott.

A preliminary hearing was set for next Thursday. Warring was released under $2,000 bond.

The warrant served on Emmett was the same used by Blick when he raided the headquarters of the Warring gang in the 2400 block Pennsylvania avenue northwest Tuesday night. Three men arrested in the place also were charged with operating a lottery and released under the same bond.

Meanwhile, police charged Maurice Sweeney, 29, 3232 Thirteenth street northwest, with taking property without right in connection with the theft of a taxicab which was found in the Potomac River Wednesday morning.

The cab is owned by Clair A. Kensinger who lives on the third floor of the Pennsylvania avenue address, and police believe gang members had the car pushed into the river. Kensinger asked for police protection Wednesday, and said he thought the gang held him responsible for the police raid.

Air Raid Rulings To Cover Vatican

Vatican City, Feb. 18 (AP).—Italy's antiaircraft precautions today were extended to cover Vatican City. Residents of the Holy City, where Pope Pius XI is recovering from the serious stages of his long illness, were ordered to obey the same regulations as citizens of Rome during forthcoming air maneuvers.

Chevy Chase Citizens Ask Red Rider Repeal

Reaffirming its previous stand the Chevy Chase Citizens Association Wednesday night voted to ask repeal of the "red rider," which prohibits District school teachers from teaching communism.

The association went on record as opposed to the legalization of racing and pari-mutuel betting in the District. It asked that a bus terminal be constructed as soon as possible in the Chevy Chase section. P. E. LeFevre, of 5317 Broad Branch road northwest, was admitted to membership in the organization.

It costs over half a million more to make

WE COULD save over half a million dollars every year —by substituting other methods for those we now use in producing Four Roses.

But we won't! For we believe there's no other way to achieve Four Roses' superb quality.

You see, Four Roses is all whiskey. More—it's a glorious combination of several straight whiskies. Each of these whiskies is distilled the grand old-fashioned way —the costliest method there is. Each is outstanding for some special virtue . . . aroma, body, smoothness, or flavor.

Blended together our way, these several whiskies merge all their virtues into one magnificent liquor— and that's Four Roses!

"But it costs me so little more to buy!"

"I KNEW I was treating myself to something special the moment I first tasted Four Roses. But imagine my surprise afterward to discover that this whiskey —the finest I'd ever put my lips to—cost only a quarter more a pint than the whiskey I'd been buying!"

Labor Speeding Drive to Alter Supreme Court

Letter Sent All Members of Congress; Change Called Vital to Workers.

open" his "inclination" is against increasing the court's membership.

Brown said he thought failure of judges individually to subordinate their personal legal opinions is the cause of much of the criticism.

Administration supporters were claiming privately yesterday they could count ultimately on 53 Senate votes for the bill, while the opposition was listing 40 "certain" against, and 15 doubtful. One Democratic Senator, Edward C. Johnson, of Colorado, who earlier was quoted as favoring the President's plan, said last night he preferred to be counted as uncommitted. Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, who has steadily declined to commit himself, is expected to come out against the plan in the next two or three days.

Reported opposition from certain church groups and sectarian newspapers led to forecasts in one Capitol quarter yesterday that the issue will be aired in many pulpits before the Congressional show-down.

Father Charles E. Coughlin, repeated "dictatorship" charges yesterday in a signed article published in his weekly review, Social Justice. Coughlin said President Roosevelt "wants to be a dictator, and "the whole Supreme Court issue is an issue between dictatorship and democracy."

Fears Coup d'Etat.

"Let us view it objectively before we outline the premises which lead to the conclusion that Mr. Roosevelt is preparing a coup d'etat," he wrote.

Associated Press dispatches from New York last night said six members of the voluntary committee of lawyers who figured prominently in bringing about prohibition repeal, called it "unmistakably an attempt to pack the court" and expressed "vehement" opposition. Led by Joseph H. Choate, jr., they released a letter urging State and local bar associations to consider the proposal.

A center of Capitol discussion yesterday was the alternative plan put forward by Senators Wheeler and Bone for a constitutional amendment to enable Congress to override Supreme Court decisions by a two-thirds vote, with a Congressional election intervening.

Burke Urges Change.

A change was suggested yesterday by Senator Edward R. Burke, Nebraska Democrat, and opponent of the President's plan. Burke thought one year should be allowed for ratification of the Wheeler-Bone amendment instead of the seven proposed in their resolution. Wheeler was represented as willing to accept a modification to two years.

Labor's Nonpartisan League's letter to members of Congress yesterday said that not only labor legislation, but "legislation most needed to restore health to agriculture" is impossible without court reform.

The Berry-Lewis-Hillman organization said "time will not permit" any other course than that proposed by the President.

By the time an amendment could be adopted, "the damage of unrestricted industrial autocracy would have been done," the letter stated.

Sees Hope in Bills.

The League said that on passage of additional labor measures rests the only hope of combating unemployment, of increasing consumer purchasing power and of raising the living standards of the great bulk of the industrial population.

"Those members of Congress who honestly feel that other methods of court reform would be less open to objection should reflect upon the history of our Supreme Court—of the many grave crises into which the obtuseness of the judges have plunged the Nation," it continued.

"Senators and Representatives honestly believing in other methods may be commended for their fine ethical discriminations, but we would respectfully suggest to them that we have been led into this economic and political impasse by men whose ethics have been open to serious question. It would be a bitter paradox if unscrupulous reactionaries might now rely upon the overscrupulousness of progressives to aid in the destruction of our democracy."

Taking the offensive in the House for the President's plan, Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, first to introduce the President's bill, yesterday was organizing a bloc of House members to offset the work of an opposition bloc led by Representative E. E. Cox, Georgia Democrat.

Maverick charged in the House yesterday that the head of the Sons of the American Revolution was "using his organization to prostitute his high office for Republican politics." He said the head of the S. A. R. was a Republican, and secretly was sending telegrams to members of the organization urging them to wire protests to Congress.

Saunders, Grocery Magnate, Plans New Food-Store Chain

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 18.—Dynamic Clarence Saunders announced today he is ready to try for a third fortune with an amazing new "Keedoozle" grocery store in which electricity delivers the customers' purchases and adds up the cost."

"These stores will be opened all over the world under standard franchises," Saunders said. "We are going to sell everybody except the cannibals. This one store will gross a million dollars the first year."

Saunders speaks easily of millions. He has made and lost two fortunes in grocery store chains.

He plans to open his first "Keedoozle" store about March 6, he said, adding others as needed. The name, "Keedoozle," doesn't mean anything particularly.

A newsman "previewed" the new store today.

The customer enters and obtains a "key"—a fiber rod about 7 inches long with a knob on the end containing a red light bulb.

He walks past glass-encased shelves. If he sees any item he wants, he inserts the "key" in a corresponding hole at the side. This sets up an electical contact. The bulb flashes red. If the customer wants two of the item, he waits for a second flash.

In this way he selects his meats, his eggs, milk or canned goods.

Concluding, he returns to the cashier—the only employe he ever sees—and hands in his key.

The cashier inserts the key in another hole, and presto! it releases all the contacts he has made. His packages come tumbling out on a conveyor belt even as an electrically operated adding machine automatically totals the cost.

Garcia Indicted On 30 Charges By Grand Jury

'White Tie' Suspect Faces Possible Sentence of 715 Years.

Providing for an aggregate maximum sentence of 715 years if the defendant is convicted on all charges, 30 indictments were returned yesterday against George Garcia, 25-year-old alleged "white tie" burglar.

Twenty-seven charges of housebreaking and larcency, two of housebreaking and one of larcency are contained in the true bills handed down by the District grand jury. Conviction on all 30 carry a minimum aggregate sentence of 143 years.

A fast worker who allegedly victimized more than two score homes in the northwest section section before he was captured, Garcia now is being held in District Jail in lieu of bail.

Other Indictments.

Additional indictments against three members of the "Boots and Spurs" gang also were returned yesterday.

Fitting his clothing to the type of home he picked to loot, Garcia often went about his tasks in the formal attire of a gentleman out for the evening, police charged. Often, it was alleged, he wore a formal attire, using strips of celluloid to open doors noiselessly when occupants of homes or apartments were away.

Loot obtained in his depredations totaled about $50,000, Detectives Joseph Shimon and Harry Britton said in testifying before the grand jury. They said they had catalogued robberies in which it was apparent strips of celluloid had been inserted between the door and the lock to force an entry. Some of his alleged loot was recovered in New York.

Among homes entered by Garcia, police said, were those of Augustus E. Giegengack, the Public Printer; a store at 1306 G street northwest; the homes of Mary F. Pierce, Elizabeth Fairall, Edna L. Garrison, Edward J. Farley, Mildred Kougher, Helen V. Meens, Lanette Hetzel, Margaret H. Clark, Frank L Tobin, Joseph Tausek, Alma Barker, Thelma F. Weiss, Virginia MacDonald, Temple Hilliard, Elva F. Houseman, Alfred Lindstrom, Harriet V. Galt, Alice H. Dodge, Marian E. Martin, Jean N. Morrison, Morgan V. Martin, Edward H. Sehrt, Mauricea J. Taxey, Stanton S. Torreyson, Amy Kirkpatrick, Samuel Peacock, Rose H. McCabe, and Arthur J. Rosenblatt.

Charged With 11 Crimes.

In another batch of indictments the grand jury charged James E. Thornton, colored, with 11 cases of housebreaking and larceny, and seven of robbery. The charges revolved about a wild spree of stick-ups and thefts in November and December. In all instances the loot obtained was small, police said.

Additional indictments were voted against the "boots and spurs" gang, already under accusation in a number of cases. They are additionally charged with robbing a couple in an automobile at Hains Point, and with assaulting five "red caps" near the Union Station in an attempt to rob them. The trio is William N. Beck, Jack Joseph Kurz, and Paul Berger.

Other indictments charged Hugh P. McLendon, colored, with the second degree slaying of Christine Readon, also colored, and named Charles Slater, colored, as the slayer of his wife, Laura Slater, also colored. The charge was manslaughter.

Other Indictments.

Those indicted were:

Raymond Spriggs, non-support; John L. Leapley, Carl Akowsky, Nicholas Hoffman, George Townes, Norman R. Cole and Melcher D. Robles, grand larceny; Joseph Smith, Harry Pelham, Eugene Tolbert, Walter Moore, Roland Jones, Charles Jackson, Charles Chatman, Mary Elizabeth Preston, George Garcia (30 charges), James R. Thornton (11 charges), housebreaking; James R. Thornton (seven charges), Curtis Knight, William Dublin, Earl W. Larsen, William N. Beck, Jack Joseph Kurz and Paul Berger, robbery; William N. Beck, Jack Joseph Kurz, assault with intent to commit robbery; George L. Davis, robbery; Linwood Davus, arson; Frederick Beverly and John Giles, violation of section 263, title 18, U. S. code; Hobart Adkins and Wiley Nicholson, assault with a dangerous weapon; John Randall, Clarence Davis, John W. Machall, Raymond Davis and Milton Hart, violation of section 73, title 18, U. S. code; Melvin Johnson, Matthew James, Samuel Hart, Neta Wagner, John Frank Herrlein, Huion Jones, Shirlye Kaplan, James Jacob Kaplan, James O. Braxton, Leon Harrison, Robert Smith, Alvin Ryans, Jeremiah Ross, John Stanley Crow, William P. Moses, Charles Hurley, Philip M. Petrone, Earl L. Dixon, Vincent Nocera, James P. Stead and Thomas Edward Marshall, gaming charges.

William Harvey and James Payne, embezzlement; Ethel Walsh, forgery and uttering; Ruth Douglass, Robert E. Stewart, Heskiah Bryant, Henry Pratt, and Mack Charles Allen, violation of liquor taxing act of 1934; Charles Slater, manslaughter; and Hugh P. McLendon, second degree murder.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were: Walter Spence and Willie Baker, assault with intent to commit robbery; Eddie Coleman, assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill; and Jesse B. Harrison, pandering.

Beware The Cough

From a common cold That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

A Two-Edged Weapon.

The biggest issue left unsettled by the agreement which terminated the automobile strike is arising elsewhere. That question is whether strikers may arbitrarily take possession of their employers' property and hold it until their demands are met. The law on this point has already been clarified. Until public thinking and official action are likewise clarified, however, sit-down tactics are more likely to increase than disappear.

New York was brought to a realization of the dangers involved in this sort of coercion when striking service employes entrenched themselves in the furnace room of an apartment house and withheld heat and hot water from the residents. Obviously strikers cannot be permitted to endanger the health of innocent persons to gain their ends. And this provocative conduct has helped to bring about a sharp modification of the policy under which New York police had been instructed to "make no arrests for trespass."

The New York police have also been called upon to use force against strikers who had taken possession of the WPA labor relations office. These employes, who had been given work as an act of public charity, in effect threatened to obstruct the operation of a Government agency. It must be evident to every citizen that conduct so nearly akin to insurrection cannot be tolerated.

Sit-down strikes in private plants have been handled with leniency because of a general desire to avoid rioting and possible bloodshed. That attitude needs no defense. Yet is it impossible to sanction the illegal seizure of either Government offices or private property. Whatever the underlying provocation, strikers cannot afford to take such an untenable position that the forces of law and order become automatically lined up against them. And Communists who advocate such tactics will have no logical cause for complaint if their headquarters are in turn subjected to mob violence.

Judge Gadola, who issued the order for evacuation of the General Motors plants in Flint, Mich., has rightly pointed out the serious consequences of permitting any group to defy the law. People served with papers in minor cases are "laughing at the court officers," he says, "and pointing out that the court was impotent to enforce its will upon the strikers . . ." It is entirely reasonable for him to demand the appearance of union leaders to answer contempt charges, regardless of any agreement with their employer.

To make a practice of suspending fundamental laws simply because a strike is in progress would be unthinkable. Union leaders who are eager to establish the labor movement on a progressive and responsible footing cannot too quickly discountenance this essentially illegal and therefore two-edged weapon.

A Philippine Trade Treaty.

President Manuel Quezon's visit to this country, and the appointment of former Gov. Paul V. McNutt as United States high commissioner to the Philippines, combine to bring to the fore the problems confronting our Asiatic dependency. It is well to remember that the enactment of the Philippine independence law in 1934 did not settle the most formidable issue before the islanders. They are still necessarily much concerned over the economic future of their country.

As the law now stands, American tariffs would be gradually applied to Philippine products as a prelude to attainment of complete sovereignty by the new republic in 1946. President Quezon has persistently maintained that this provision will inflict serious injury upon the islands' chief industries unless modified. Presumably he is coming to Washington to request a modification of such requirements, relying upon President Roosevelt's virtual promise that "imperfection and inequalities" in the law would be corrected.

As President of the Philippine Commonwealth, Mr. Quezon is naturally reluctant to contemplate any curtailment of purchases by that country's leading customer. The dominant coconut oil and sugar industries are especially dependent upon the American market. Yet it would be unreasonable to expect a continuation of economic favoritism when political independence has been achieved. Congress could not logically favor the Philippines above Cuba in this respect.

The United States has a keen interest, however, in the maintenance of economic stability in the islands, especially during their period of transition to full nationhood. No doubt some changes in the commercial policy fixed by the independence act will prove desirable, and it seems probable that the adjustments can be secured through a reciprocal trade agreement. The treaty with Cuba now in effect sets a precedent that may well be followed in seeking a solution of the Philippines' dilemma.

A Foreign Entanglement.

The decision of the Baldwin government to authorize a sharp increase in the size of the British fleet has produced the inevitable repercussion on this side of the Atlantic.

It is "a fair presumption," says Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, "that if any other power expands its navy, appreciably, we shall have to follow."

Because the new British construction appears to be for the purpose of replacing over-age warships, the United States may not seek to match the British program ship for ship and ton for ton. But there is every probability that because of recent European developments, Great Britain will not stop with replacements but will proceed with its ambitious rearmament program, on sea as well as on land and in the air.

To maintain the principle of Anglo-American naval parity, therefore, it will be incumbent upon our Government, sooner or later, to enlarge the American fleet. Thus events which we have fondly thought to be no concern of ours may now force us to act in a manner certain to add new burdens to those already borne by the harassed American taxpayer.

Thus is revealed the inherent unrealism of the efforts now being made in Congress to insulate ourselves by mandatory neutrality legislation. In washing our hands of our responsibility as a great power we cannot, it is clear, avoid the consequences which may be visited upon the world and which we might help avert. Indeed, it is clear that certain forms of mandatory neutrality may be an active rather than a passive cause of American militarism.

One reason why the Baldwin government has seen fit to plan the enlargement of the British fleet, and why these efforts may later be redoubled, is the emphasis placed on sea power by our present leaning toward a "cash-and-carry" neutrality policy. Great Britain, under such a system would be in a position to get from us those essential raw materials without which her fighting forces would be crippled. But the enlargement of British naval power to insure this end in turn compels us to enlarge our own naval establishment.

Those whose duty it is to plan for the defense of this Nation do not and cannot take seriously the assertion of mandatory neutrality advocates that such legislation will really keep us out of war. On the contrary the presumption is that such legislation may only pile up complications for the United States and in so doing make it essential for us to be heavily armed on land and sea.

It is no mere coincidence, but logical cause and effect, that the clamor for mandatory neutrality should, step by step, be paralleled by increasing American armaments. Admiral Leahy puts the relationship in very moderate language when he points out that present neutrality policies would not diminish the need for a navy second to none.

Bartering Artists.

Even in our most tariff-ridden days, and despite increasingly rigid immigration laws, the United States has happily never tried to close its doors to European scholars, and artists invited to help make American life more abundant in the best sense of that term. These visitors have been exempted from our contract labor laws. And while there may have been in the past a certain snobbishness in our enthusiasm for foreigners of reputation, the overwhelming majority of them have won our plaudits through unquestioned merit alone.

Has experience justified our liberality in this regard? No one who examines the record can have any doubts on the subject. The long line of scholars engaged by American universities, the even longer line of musical and theatrical artists who, since colonial days, have been invited to play in our theaters, perform in our orchestras and on our concert stages, have had a fructifying effect on our intellectual and artistic history.

Now Representative Dickstein would upset the fine old American tradition of welcoming talent, whatever its nationality. Because, unfortunately, certain foreign nations discriminate against American artists of the concert stage, the theater and the screen, he would retaliate by imposing equivalent restrictions on the talented nationals of those lands. His bill, on which hearings are now in progress, stipulates that the number of musical and theatrical performers permitted entry into the United States from any one foreign nation be limited to the number of Americans "of similar qualifications" allowed to perform in that nation.

In other words the rule henceforth should be: One Toscanini for one Toscanini, one Garbo for one Garbo, one piccolo player for one piccolo player. It is a crude application of the crude barter principle, so vigorously and effectively fought by Secretary Hull, to the field where its applicability is least admissible.

For Mr. Dickstein's bill would reduce art to the level of sacks of potatoes and bales of cotton. It is misguided nationalism run riot, and it is based on the utterly false assumption that cultural interest is a fixed quantity, to be divided among available artists, instead of something that can be indefinitely expanded.

As the testimony of Walter Damrosch and many others before the House committee reveals, the Dickstein bill does violence to the best instincts of those artists whom his bill professedly seeks to protect against foreign competition. Messrs. Smoot and Grundy have been retired from the political scene. But Mr. Dickstein proves that their spirit still finds manifestation, and this in a field which the most extreme protectionists have heretofore left exempt.

Moving Toward Solution.

Members of Congress who handle District legislation are beginning to discover serious defects in the set-up of local government here. The Jacobs committee report and the discussion aroused by it have brought to their attention problems that have heretofore largely escaped notice. And, fortunately for the District, the report seems to be accepted more as a challenge than as a program to be followed.

Representative Collins has found that the District's budgetary system is operating unsatisfactorily. That is by no means a new discovery. Students of government familiar with the absurd procedure by which the local program of expenditures is formulated have been crying for reform for many years. But Congress has given the matter no consideration.

Mr. Collins is said to be studying a proposal to have a special investigator analyze the chief items in the local budget for the benefit of the House subcommittee on District appropriations. That plan might have certain advantages. But it misses the heart of the problem.

Under the present system the District budget is necessarily a hodgepodge when it reaches Congress. It is first formulated by the Commissioners and then reshaped by the Federal Budget Bureau, using quite different means of determining the city's needs. "Even the Jacobs committee roundly condemned this division of authority. "Effective financial responsibility," it said, "should be concentrated in the heads of the District government."

The remedy for loose budget-making is not the appointment of another agency to survey proposed appropriations but the elimination of that Budget Bureau control which makes it impossible for the local government to submit either supply bills or legislative measures directly to Congress. Some legislators have already interested themselves in removing this very serious handicap upon the Board of Commissioners. Representative Collins could render a real service to the Capital City by lending his support to that movement.

At the same time there is a growing realization on Capitol Hill that the local government can never function properly until the Commissioners are granted authority to handle all routine municipal affairs. Most Congressmen would be delighted to be relieved of the necessity of passing petty legislation for the Capital City. If a reasonable measure is presented to them with the support of the community, its enactment should be a relatively simple matter.

Each turn of events suggests the desirability of working out a practical program of immediate administrative changes along with any formula that can be devised to end the perennial fiscal dilemma. When Congress is in a mood to consider these matters Washington cannot afford to let the opportunity pass.

Pipe And Puff.

When in the eighteenth century John Byrom coined the phrase, "clear as a whistle," he wasn't thinking of chimneys and he had no thought of being a prophet; nor did his countless thousands of misquoters who made it "clean as a whistle" dream they were giving further appositeness to a prophecy. But, take it from Hillary W. St. Clair, metallurgist at the Department of Mines, a prophecy it was, and now is sober sooth; for a whistle in a chimney may clear it of soot.

This has not yet been demonstrated beyond peradventure, but the little idea seems about ready to grow into the big smoke consumer.

At the Interior Department the other day Mr. St. Clair demonstrated that high frequency sound waves will solidify smoke; and there is no technical reason, he said, why what happened in his big glass jar could not happen in every chimney in the land.

It may be that some day in the future firemen will enter smoke-filled rooms and toot electrical whistles preparatory to sweeping up the smoke on dustpans. The day may come when Pittsburgh instead of being the smoky city will be the noisy city; and assail one's eardrums instead of one's collars. Ever and anon a man pays dear for his whistle.

But science, of course, will eventually attend to that little matter. After the whistle has killed the smoke something will be invented to deaden the whistle.

Meantime we are grateful for having progressed thus far. "Whistle and I'll come to you, my lad," says the Smoke to the Metallurgist.

Government Employes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am very much amused over the write-ups which are given to overworked Government employes. It is a shame that the newspapers print such tripe. There never was, is or ever will be a Government employe who puts in seven hours of work a day.

I have found from experience that the average Government employe cannot stand up under the average boss in a private office. He is so used to fooling his or her time away that after eight hours of work he is almost dead.

I say, let the Government employes work overtime. If they were put on a 12-hour day maybe they would manage to get in seven or eight hours of work.

AMUSED OBSERVER.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to Mr. George Tibbett, he cannot be a real estate man, a property owner, business man or a Government employe, or he would see the advantage of more money to the city. We do not think it will cost the Government any more to pay the help than it does now to have as large a labor turnover as it does at present. GEORGE INGRAM.

Jefferson Academy Idea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The suggestion of Mr. Louis Bessemer, in your columns, that Jefferson be memorialized through an academy, makes sense! We already have three institutions to teach the gentle arts of killing your neighbor—West Point, Annapolis and the War College. Why not an institution to teach our youth the arts of peace and government? Instead of a costly pile of stone for people to kodak, why not build to set forward the things Jefferson stood for—government devoted to the more abundant life, individual liberty and the achievement of happiness!

Elderman's Cartoon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to say that I think the cartoons appearing in The Post are easily the best in the country.

During the autumn and winter there have been some exceptional ones such as the "American Constitution" and the "British Crown" on October 21, and last week "To Furnish the Supreme Court Practical Assistance" and "Gabriel."

Mr. Elderman has an inspired pen and I would like him to know how we are enjoying his drawings.

Washington's "Squalor."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I shudder to think what Washington will look like if the proposed five-year street widening program goes through and our remaining circles and small parks are further denuded and chopped away and shade trees by wholesale are destroyed.

Why are these drastic changes necessary?

New York City, with narrow cross streets and 10 times the congestion of Washington, manages to handle her traffic by the simple devices of one way streets and prohibition of the use of public streets for free private garages.

Anyone who has lived in Washington for 20 years, or returns to it after an absence of years, and sees the appalling changes for the worse in the appearance of the Nation's Capital begins to wonder if there is anything except traffic that has the slightest consideration in the minds of the various commissions and committees that control affairs here today.

Our streets and sidewalks are unkempt, filled with rubbish and litter, our alleys are filthy, the smoke nuisance is little abated, our once lovely small parks are barren stretches of asphalt and cement, or mud. The sites of former beautiful historic buildings and houses are now occupied by execrable parking lots, filling stations and hot dog stands. A New York visitor, writing in the New Yorker, refers frankly to the increasing "squalor" of Washington. All of these degradations go on unchecked and when attention is called to the lack in any necessary public service, such as enforcing the ordinances against strewing litter, the answer is invariably "lack of funds."

But by some strange incongruity unlimited funds seem always to be available for any sort of destructive "project." If our engineering minds are concerned with really solving the traffic problem why do they not consider the substitution of a rational co-ordinated system of publicly-owned public vehicles of transportation in place of the present enormously wasteful chaos of each man trying to jam his "private locomotive" into the public streets, with one occupant using a five-passenger machine an hour or two a day.

And, just as a beginning of rationality, if split seconds are so valuable in moving this congested mass, how about putting two men back on the one man street cars? I have repeatedly seen a whole welter of traffic held up on a changing light while an overworked motorman answered questions and gave transfers and change.

If the present trends continue what becomes of our once complacent pride in Washington as a beautiful residential city and one fit to rank with the handsome capitals of the world?

Today's depressing scene, with its promise only of becoming steadily worse, reminds one of the observation of a character in one of Sinclair Lewis' books. An European visitor returned from America is asked his impression of the United States and replies:

"My impression is that it is a country in which so much attention has been devoted to getting more and more rapidly from place to place that there is scarcely any place left worth getting to."

District Speed Limits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Judge Hitt, seconded by The Post, has issued an invitation to motorists to ignore the speed limits. This invitation, if accepted, will undoubtedly increase our already appalling death and injury record.

This action must be most discouraging to the traffic authorities and the Police Department who are endeavoring to reduce our losses in dead and injured.

In adding to the already difficult task of the authorities you and Judge Hitt have done a distinct disservice to the community, and when we are counting our dead and injured you must take your full measure of responsibility for them.

Seaman's Discharge Book Debate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is charming naivete or something displayed in your editorial entitled "The Continuous Discharge Book." Men who go down to the sea in ships—after a few voyages, at least—become well known to the hiring agents of the lines, and the availability of their records is in no wise dependent on a single or continuous Government certification.

Also the "sea lawyer" is ubiquitous. He will never be beached by a mere record book, if that is the aim of the shipping interests, as is the contention of the seaman. Old Andy Furuseth saw to it that all members of the I. S. U. were trained in the law of their calling, and Andy is still the inspiration of the merchant sailor, regardless of organization.

As to faking a discharge certificate merely to obtain a berth, I am somewhat puzzled. It must be remembered that most forms of sea duty require a deal of skill, in addition to being quite arduous, and why an impostor should seek this work, or how he could escape detection for even a few watches, is beyond me. And I have been to sea.

Ah, no! There is something deeper than abhorrence of a continuous-discharge book involved in the seamen's controversy, although frankly I am at a loss to label it. Could it be wages? Let us hear from a representative seaman.

CHARLES E. CROSS.
Washington, Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to your editorial in The Post of February 17 regarding the discharge book conflict, I would like to bring a few things to your attention that you have possibly overlooked.

The first paragraph of Senator Copeland's act says that its purpose is to promote safety at sea. No one is more interested in this than we, the men who go to sea, because we are the ones who go down with a ship as the result of poor safety requirements and equipment. It is for this reason we are most interested in making it possible for any one of us to note unsafe conditions aboard ship and bring them to the attention of the proper authorities without fear of losing our jobs. In the past this has not been possible. There have been many instances where men who have stepped out of the crowd to ask to have unsafe or unhealthy conditions remedied have simply had others preferred to them when the crew was signed on the ship's articles for another voyage.

These men who ask safer and healthier conditions aboard ship are the same ones who go on strike if these conditions are not obtained. An example is the instance in Honolulu where a crew sat down rather than risk the danger of taking their ship to sea with the hatches open to the sky. The fact that a man shows in his discharge book that he was aboard this ship at the time this incident occurred would mean that other men who did not show such a discharge would be preferred to him when crews were hired for the next voyage. This would happen even though he were as good or better than any other sailor who applied. His discharge at the end of that trip, instead of being a letter of recommendation as it should have been, would serve the opposite purpose of making him keep his mouth shut the next time.

The men who go to sea ask no more than those ashore, namely, that they be allowed to prove their competency by submitting letters of recommendation and proof of their experience. They are willing to take examinations, as their officers and many of the men have had to heretofore, to prove their competence. No one ashore is required to submit letters of condemnation when he makes application for work. If he has good enough letters of recommendation and has had sufficient experience he deserves to be hired. The number of discharges a seaman possesses tells definitely just how much experience he has had.

In the past our discharge slips have been printed on a very poor grade of paper and could be altered readily. The continuous discharge book contains similar ordinary paper. Our desire is not only that this continuous book with its poor grade of paper be repealed but that our individual discharges be printed on safety paper similar to bank check paper and that raised letter seals be placed over the signatures of the issuing officer and seaman to whom it is issued. We are hurt the most by any traffic in discharge slips through the putting of incompetent men aboard ship with us.

White House Blundering

QUOTED below is an Associated Press dispatch from Washington:

"Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President, said Mr. Roosevelt was hopeful some criticism of his court proposals would prove as good an omen as the boos he had got in Wall Street during the last campaign.

"The secretary said the President had arisen slightly indisposed today, but felt better immediately upon reading of opposition by the Union League Club of New York."

Our reaction to such trivial comment coming out of the White House is something like a cross between a pain in the stomach and a pain in the heart.

The question which is being pondered most earnestly, most seriously by tens of millions of Americans today is not to find its true answer in either politics or partisanship. Some of those earnest ponderers are so troubled in spirit that they are asking divine guidance. They want to be right, not for the sake of politics but for the sake of the future of the United States. To these, what Wall Street does about it or what Union League Club members say about it, is utterly immaterial. And to them such references as those made by Mr. Early have a demagogic tang.

And if the purpose of such light treatment of a great question involving the soundness and integrity of government, and the conception of principles by governors, is to suggest to the reading public that opposition to the Supreme Court feature of Mr. Roosevelt's judicial reorganization plans, is made up of elements represented by Wall Street and the Union League Club, it is disingenuous. For the fact is that opposition by Democrats who supported Roosevelt and the New Deal in the last election is widespread. They are afraid.

If there is, outside of the South, a Democratic or Independent newspaper that supported the President last year that is now supporting the suggested recasting of the Supreme Court, we have not seen it quoted. Even in the South, the majority of the President's journalistic friends are probably either opposed or in grave doubt on that vital question. Were the listeners in the White House intent upon hearing the thoughts of the thoughtful, they would discern that even in the Roosevelt strongholds, there is suggestive, significant lukewarmness, doubt.

It is the right of these faithful, loyal Democrats, who fought for the President and for the New Deal program because they believed in the soundness of both, to have their doubts considered, their questionings answered.

To ignore their conscientious scruples touching this issue of vital governmental principle, is not playing the game fairly.

To bunch them with the Republican partisans of the Union League Club is not treating them with honesty.

They are thinking of their country, not of themselves. They are not jumping jacks. If there be patriots in the land, then these people belong in their ranks.

Strange Fires.

One of the worst fires of the present century was at Baltimore in 1904, when a large part of the city was burned. The heat was so terrific that more than a week elapsed before the businessmen whose premises had been destroyed could get at their safes. In the first safe opened—a jeweler's—gold watches, rings and ornaments were found fused in a lump on the floor. Yet the insides of the safe doors were not even scorched.

In another safe, jewelry had melted, but a box of matches was intact, and a white silk handkerchief was not even discolored. In a third case a safe seemed to be all right, but the moment the door was opened everything burst into flame.

A fire broke out in Leningrad in the building that was formerly the palace of the Grand Duke Nicholas. This had an iron roof. Fifteen people trapped in the upper stories climbed to the roof.

They were seen from below to be dancing grotesquely among the rising flames. What had actually happened was that the roof had become electrified by the cutting of electric cables. The sufferers were rescued by men wearing rubber shoes.

Most of us have read of one strange result of the great fire at the Crystal Palace in December last. Goldfish in the central tank were found to be still alive, but they had lost their brilliant color and turned steel blue. This brings to mind the case of a horse rescued from a burning stable in the suburbs of Chicago.

It had been a bay, but two days later had turned quite white.

Censorship in Japan.

The Japanese censorship had not been heard from for some time, but reports on its activity recently show that it is still hard at work protecting the country from insidious influences.

It was a master stroke that barred the two films, "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Mary of Scotland." Movie-goers, remembering nothing about Japan in either picture, may wonder over this, but the censors are subtle as well as watchful. A movie about a mutiny is obviously revolutionary. And one about a royal personage who is executed plainly would hurt the feelings of Japan's monarch and might lead some spectators to "dangerous thoughts."

Baloney Pictures.

ONE DAY, when Babe Ruth was a new celebrity, I was assigned to go around with him and do a living, human document on a day in the life of a great man. We made photographs of the high spots, including a study of the Babe answering an imaginary phone call with one finger holding down the hook, and another of the Babe biting his tongue and squinting at the eye of a needle as he went through the motions of threading the same so that Mrs. Ruth the First could strut her frugal domesticity by sewing herself a hat. She didn't really sew any hat.

She got out an old bird's nest and posed with it in her lap as the Babe ogled the needle's eye until the photographer said "okay." When he said "okay," that closed the hat scene.

It was an off day for some reason, and we thought of many activities for the Babe and the late Mrs. Ruth. The photographer kept on suggesting that he borrow an apron from someone in the kitchen and pretend to be making up a bed or helping Mrs. Ruth wipe dishes. But they were living in a big hotel at the time, and that sounded rather silly. It wasn't so much that I did not wish to deceive the readers. On the contrary, I was afraid they might not be deceived.

• • • •

STILL, the photographer hated to give up on these two. He said Dempsey always posed with an apron making beds and doing dishes, even at the Murray Hill Hotel.

But along in the afternoon I said, "Let's go down somewhere and catch a fish," and the Babe said, "all right."

So we went down to a pier on the Hudson and borrowed a fishpole from a man, and the Babe sat on a pile in his sulphur-colored flannel pants and grinned and fished. He didn't catch any fish though, and we had to have one, so I said I would grab a cab and go across to Broadway and be right back with a fish. At that, the man who owned the pole said he would lend us a fish, too, and opened a newspaper lying there in the sun and unrolled a dry, rigid fish about 8 inches long which he had caught many hours before.

It was the only fish caught on the pier all day, and in return for the loans we took a picture of the man gazing, enviously, as the cut lines said when the picture came out in the paper, at the Babe.

I suppose this man or his heirs have the clippings yet.

AL SMITH struck a blow at photo journalism when he called this kind of pictures baloney pictures, but I do not think the harm was permanent, for I have seen many more of the same kind since. There was one showing the manager of the Giants pushing a lawn roller, and I am just shrewd enough to suspect that the manager of the New York Giants has too much to do to go shoving a lawn roller around the ball park in person.

The baloney picture does not seriously deceive anybody, but provides harmless entertainment and fills the periods between blizzards, hurricanes, earthquakes and Admiral Byrd.

I notice, though, that whether because of Mr. Smith's remark or for other reasons, very few baloney pictures have been coming out of the White House run. There was one of Mr. Roosevelt's dog, a setter, cleaning a plate, following the story of the dog having eaten up 24 portions of ham and eggs, but dog pictures and most other animal pictures are legitimate human interest.

In fact, when Mr. Smith was Governor of New York everyone who managed to catch possum, fox or owl would send it to the Governor for his kids, who pretty soon found themselves with a fair sort of minor-league zoo on their hands. The papers did not neglect the Governor's kids' zoo. If such are baloney, then Mr. Smith has sliced his share.

• • • •

THE PRESIDENTS also used to be targets for a great cargo of two-headed calves and freak potatoes which happened to grow into remote human likenesses of Abraham Lincoln, but Mr. Roosevelt seems to have discouraged his loving and publicity-loving friends in various parts of the country who otherwice might send him all such trash.

Mr. Harding was a victim of some exceedingly baloney pictures, notably one showing a reception for a stout female in a conventional kootch dancer's costume claiming to be an Egyptian princess, whose entourage, when the police got a look at the rotogravures, was seen to include two of the most notorious picture crashers in the country. They were boys whose only weakness was gaudy uniforms and newspaper photographs, one a pants presser and the other a clerk by occupation, and they had shown up on the White House lawn wearing masquerade suits and claiming to be Egyptian admirals.

But very strangely, the baloniest Presidential picture of them all caught a very sharp President, Mr. Coolidge, in the act of shaking a few sprigs of clover off a hay fork on his father's acres in Vermont, attired in brand-new overalls and wearing a high, stiff linen collar. After that I thought maybe it had been a mistake not to take one of the Babe doing dishes in his swell New York hotel.

Trailers and Colleges.

Trailers are crashing into college. Several institutions of higher education report students living in underslung fly-by-night bungalows, and educators are beginning to view with alarm.

• • • •

Stationary domitories may become as old-fashioned as long-haired fullbacks. Millionaries who have given millions for quadrangles are wondering if they made a mistake and should have underwritten trailer camps.

• • • •

There is the fear that the college course of the future may have to include four greasings a year, one complete overhaul job a season, and some arrangement with the faculty for servicing an automobile ice-box.

• • • •

Students used to take pride in rooming in dormitories surrounded by traditions and associated with memories of distinguished former occupants. The rooms were at no disadvantage just because they had been in one spot 100 years.

• • • •

• • • •

A dormitory that can do 60 miles or better seems the smart thing.

• • • •

Our university heads are not certain as yet whether they should be frightened or amused. They don't want to take any chances on all those billion-dollar quadrangles becoming so much abandoned real estate, just because the property is too heavy to be towed from point to point.

• • • •

Some people think it may be the forerunner of the Flivver College. They see a day when even the campus statues will be on wheels, and the memorial gateway kept in constant motion.

• • • •

Ah, the possible effects on college memories! What a treat it will be when the old grads gather in after years and tenderly recall their bright college years spent in a $1,150 trailer! And revive the memory of the night the dormitory collided with Mory's on a wet pavement!

The Court Issue

Observer Declares Real Issue Now Is Whether President Is To Change Constitution Without Popular Consent.

By Merlo J. Pusey.

A FORTNIGHT of public discussion has completely stripped from President Roosevelt's plan to enlarge the Supreme Court the neat wrapping of "judicial reform" in which it was sent to Congress. Today it is everywhere recognized as a scheme to remake the Court in the image of the New Deal. With the immediate significance of the proposal thus clarified, it is time to examine some of its more far-reaching implications.

In effect, the President is asking for the privilege of changing the Constitution without the consent of the people. That may be a harsh way of describing the natural result of the technique he wishes to employ. Yet a brief survey of the factual background leading up to his message to Congress makes any other conclusion evasive.

It is possible, of course, to argue, as the President did in his first message to the Seventy-fifth Congress, that the Constitution does not mean what the Supreme Court says it means. Many citizens share the view that in some recent opinions, particularly the New York minimum wage decision, the organic law has been too narrowly interpreted. But that is a different question. Within the last few days it has become increasingly apparent that many leaders in public life who believe that the Supreme Court has gone astray in some of its opinions are nevertheless ready to defend with al their strength the right of that body to function independent of executive interference.

Certainly these citizens can not be accused of believing that the Court is sacrosanct. Their objection is simply to a change in the rules while the game is in progress. If Congress should recognize any right in the President to change the membership of the Court because he doesn't like its decisions, then the Executive and not the judiciary would become the ultimate interpreter of the organic law, and constitutional restraints upon his power would be correspondingly weakened.

Amendments Possible In Only One Way.

AMENDMENT of the Constitucan be legitimately effected in only one way. The founding fathers concluded that no fundamental changes should be adopted until they had been thoroughly discussed and accepted by a substantial majority of the people. Glancing back over history, there seems to be no good reason to alter their judgment. If our federalized system of government is to continue functioning, every major change must be carefully weighed in all of its implications and put into effect only when it can command the support of the people in every region.

It is the sharp departure of President Roosevelt from this procedure which has aroused such widespread suspicion. After the unanimous NRA decision, the President realized that some fundamental adjustments would be necessary if his program were to be carried out. Indeed, the President is known to have begun consideration of the problem aroused by adverse Supreme Court decisions at that early date. Many plans were analyzed. After carefully concealing his intention while he was campaigning for votes, the President chose the most expedient short-cut to fundamental changes. That is scarcely in line with democratic procedure.

To clarify the issue in question it is important to understand why the Administration has turned its back upon outright amendment of the Constitution. First, it was feared that any attempt to put through an amendment would involve considerable delay. That is undoubtedly correct. Congress would hold extensive debates. If two-thirds of both houses could agree upon an amendment it would then be submitted to conventions or the legislatures of the various States. There would be further controversy, and the measure would not be approved until it could command majority support in three-fourths of the States.

However, the difficulty of amending the Constitution is often exaggerated. The record shows that Congress, rather than the States, is primarily responsible for the paucity of amendments adopted in the past. Only five changes proposed by Congress have been rejected by the States. Two of these fell only one State short of ratification. The outbreak of the Civil War interrupted ratification of one other, and the child labor amendment is still under consideration.

Attitude Of People Always Paramount.

THE SPEED with which the amendment process operates depends largely upon the attitude of the people. Repeal of prohibition was completed in nine months after Congress proposed that modification. The child labor amendment has been bandied about from State to State for nearly 13 years. From this experience it becomes obvious that proposed amendments commanding widespread public support may be rushed through with no difficulty. Changes of which the people are skeptical may be delayed for years.

Of course, this record is known to the Administration. By contending that the changes which the President has in mind would encounter undue delay, New Deal spokesmen automatically put them in the dubious column. In other words, the President is asking for authority to effect indirectly modifications which he fears might not be readily accepted by the people.

Equally dubious is the second reason for striking at the court instead of the Constitution. It is said that great difficulty is encountered in drafting an amendment that would give the Federal Government all the additional authority it seeks without depriving the States of their semi-sovereign character. Here, again, is a contention that can scarcely be denied. But why is the drafting of an amendment so complicated? Plenty of competent legislative draftsmen are available. If the Administration knows precisely what additional power it seeks, the mere drafting of the proposal should not be an insuperable task.

The chief difficulty seems to be that the President does not yet know what permanent adjustments he desires to make. At any rate, the public is in the dark on this point. That uncertainty is a strong argument against hasty adoption of any sweeping amendment. The people have always been reluctant to grant new powers to Congress until the need for them has been definitely established. And if the Executive's bid for greater latitude in shaping national policies is too amorphous to couch in words, how is it possible to justify any plan to attain those ends by devious means?

There also seems to be a fear that any proposed amendment broad enough to encompass the New Deal program for industry, agriculture and labor would frighten proponents of specific measures to enable the Government to deal temporarily with special economic problems. It is undoubtedly true that many individuals who are eager to take advantage of such measures as the AAA would not like to resign agriculture to permanent control by the Government. But that penchant for expedients can scarcely be said to justify an unconstitutional exercise of power or an attempt to stretch the organic law by packing the Supreme Court.

If the Supreme Court had taken an utterly unreasonable attitude toward New Deal legislation, there would be far more sympathy with the Administration's attempt to reconstitute that tribunal. But the most effective criticism of the Court is directed against its use of the "due process" clause to invalidate State legislation, particularly minimum wage laws. So far as the invalidation of New Deal acts is concerned, it is extremely difficult to say that the court has departed from the fundamentals of the Constitution. In the unanimous opinion against the NRA, for example, it is impossible to see how the court could have reached any other decision without making a clean break with the traditional and accepted meaning of the organic law.

Government Is One Of Limited Powers.

IT IS TRUE, of course, that in applying the charter of 1787 to present-day conditions the court has a wide margin of discretion. It is called upon to interpret eighteenth century terms in the light of twentieth century problems. But that is not the fault of the court. Nor can it be shown that the justices have unreasonably restricted the language of the founding fathers in passing upon the validity of New Deal policies.

The vital question involved in the case of virtually all Administration measures that have been thrown out is whether the Federal Government has authority to regulate industry and agriculture. As a matter of simple fact and common knowledge those powers cannot be found among the grants of authority to Congress enumerated in the organic law. And since our national regime is a government of limited powers, it requires a stretch of the imagination to assume that it has any such authority.

Where the power exercised is beyond the scope of our Federal charter as it has been interpreted for a century and a half, it is thoroughly unreasonable to expect the courts to uphold that policy by revolutionary interpretations. As Chief Justice Hughes has said in his opinion on the Guffey act, it is not for the court to change the Constitution by judicial decree. If the justices did so, they would be false to their oath to uphold the basic law as it stands.

Even if it could be assumed, however, that the court has taken a narrow view, it would not follow that it should be disciplined by the appointment of additional justices selected for the purpose of changing the court's opinions. The question as to whether the Federal Government should regulate manufacturing, labor and agriculture, as well as interstate commerce, is so broad that it might well be submitted to the people in any event. When a Supreme Court of unquestioned integrity finds that unprecedented measures enacted for the purpose of extending Federal control over major economic activities are beyond the range of constitutional powers already granted, resort to the machinery of amendment is the only procedure consistent with constitutional democracy.

Checks On Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can't help wondering why so many seemingly well-informed writers are making the erroneous statement that under our present form of government there are no checks on the courts.

Judges can be impeached. This is, of course, a check against any misconduct upon their part. The effects of any court decision constructing any Federal law can be changed by Congress by simply amending the Federal law involved — another check by Congress on the courts. The effects of any decision by the courts upon any subject matter over which the Federal Government has control can be cured by act of Congress changing the law—another check on the courts. The effects of any decision of the courts either enlarging or restricting Federal power can be changed by amending the Constitution so as to deny or give the particular power in question. Such amendments, of course, originate in Congres sand are passed upon by the people, and are checks upon the courts. Congress can alter and change the jurisdiction of the courts—another check.

These are not all of the checks on the courts but they are sufficient to show that Congress and the people do have effective checks, and that the statements of writers to the contrary are erroneous. It was never the intention of the Constitution that the President should have power to control the decisions of the courts, and God alone can help us if he ever gets that power.

The Left Agrees To Disagree.

London.

OUR BRITISH capacity for finding practical common-sense solutions to difficult problems, without disturbing fundamentals, has been admirably demonstrated by the case of Lord Hugh Cecil.

Some months ago Lord Hugh was appointed provost of Eton College. He was a member of Parliament. Peers cannot be members of Parliament, but Lord Hugh was only a courtesy lord, so that didn't trouble him. But the provost of Eton cannot occupy any other position which carries a salary, and members of Parliament are paid a lavish £400 a year by a grateful nation. Lord Hugh couldn't solve the problem by remaining a member of Parliament, and renouncing the salary, so he had to leave the legislature.

But we don't allow members of Parliament to resign, just like that. They can only give up their seats when they are appointed to an office of profit under the crown. And an office of profit under the crown, you might suppose, would disqualify him for the job of provost of Eton. Not a bit of it. We have a special job kept in cold storage for just such purposes. When a member of Parliament wants to resign he applies for the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, which by definition is an office of profit under the crown, and carries with it a salary of £1, not paid.

A steward remains in his non-existent office until the next steward is appointed; the whole House of Commons could be put through it as fast as the appointments could be gazzeted. So Lord Hugh has applied for the Chiltern Hundreds. Candidates for the necessary by-election at his Oxford constituency were chosen some seven months ago, have since been fidgeting on the sidelines, waiting for his lordship to quit. At last they are able to get into action.

THEIR SPIRITUAL lordships, the bishops of the Church of England have solmnly decided after proper debate that it is fitting for them to do what the laws of England require them to do.

The Church of England is an established church, which means not that it is subsidied by the national exchequer, but that it is a state institution, regulated by the state laws as fixed by Parliament. In the House of Lord sit the two archbishops and elected representatives of the bishops. The prayer book of the Church of England cannot be changed without the consent of the House of Commons as well as the Lords.

Their lordships decided that re-married divorced persons could not be barred from the communion table. Since the law of England does not bar such marriages, and since the laws of England regulate the Church of England, their bishops could, legally speaking, have done nothing else. But their action has been counted to them by the British press for grace.

• • • •

THERE HAS been a revival of the periodic agitation to put a stop to Gretna Green marriages. Elkton, Md., may give its curb service of marriages and licenses, to say nothing of information, but Gretna Green requires 21-day residence in Scotland before marriage in Scotch law is permissible. Yet even that is too prompt for some of us. The interesting feature of the case is that the remedy required is an alternation not in English but in Scots law. And the Scots don't like to amend their law to suit the British who cannot curb their runaways.

Although the Scots have no separate Parliament and have a Nationalist movement of their own, at least they have a body of law of their own from the English. Wales is not so fortunate. While Scotland was united to England at the accession of James the 6th of Scotland to the English throne, Wales was a conquered province and has no traditional prerogatives. And perhaps because of that the Welsh Nationalist movement is the more rabid.

To advance their Nationalist aims three Welsh worthies, degreed, cultured and all, recently set fire to some airforce buildings in Wales; at their trial they would speak nothing but Welsh, even when they were shifted from a Welsh to an English court. They are now cooling their heels in a British jail, and what they have gained for Welsh nationalism, the Welsh alone know.

THE AGE of confusion among our left-wing political parties is more solidly established than ever. A year ago remedy for confusion was suggested in the shape of a popular front, a device which had proved successful in France and in Spain in wresting an electoral majority away from the conservative parties. For want of something better to do our left-wing parties are now busy quarreling over whether or not they will stop quarreling. Mr. Pollitt's diminutive Communist Party and its blood brother, the Independent Labor Party led by Mr. Maxton, are eager for the nuptials. Sir Stafford Cripps joined them with his Socialist League, which was affiliated to the Labor Party. But promptly from Labor headquarters came excommunication for the Socialist League, which numbers its members in tens of thousands for the Labor Party's millions but contains most of the Labor intellectuals. Conformists and nonconformists are now to compete for new members among the youth of the country.

Some days ago the rejuvenated Liberal National Committee astonished the country with an appeal for funds illustrated in the press by a half-draped figure of an Amazon thrusting forward into the unknown with a statue of Liberty torch in her hand. Asked by Aldous Huxley whether they would co-operate with other progressive parties, the Liberals said no most politely, invited him round to tea to discuss the matter further, said the only solution was proportional representation. Since P. R. might bring more seats to the Liberals, it is not going to gain the support of the Labor and Conservative Parties. And so we all agree to disagree.

A List Of Them.

Although the last chapter of Ecclesiastes, in the Bible, complains of the vast number of new books, the number that appeared in that year was probably a minute fraction of the number that appeared in 1936. The Publisher's Weekly says more new books were published in 1936 than in any former year on record.

Mr. Edward Weeks compiled a list of books that had sold over a million copies each, and I printed his list in my column a few years ago. In the list there is only one book that is worthless; there are six that are sentimental and I suppose harmless; there are 13 that are decidedly worth reading; and among the 13 four are unquestionably works of genius and, so far as we can conjecture, immortal, and four more are going to be read for many years to come.

• • • •

Here is the list again, and you can decide for yourself as to the value of my classifications by making your own:

"In his Steps," by Charles M. Sheldon.
"Freckles," by Gene Stratton Porter.
"Ben Hur," by Lew Wallace.
"The Harvester," by Gene Stratton Porter.
"Tom Sawyer," by Mark Twain.
"The Winning of Barbara Worth," by Harold Bell Wright.
"Laddie," by Gene Stratton Porter.
"The Virginian," by Owen Wister.
"The Story of the Bible," by Jesse Layman Hurlbut.
"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," by John Fox.
"David Harum," by Edward Noyes Westcott.
"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"The Sheik," by Ethel M. Dell.
"Five Little Peppers," by Margaret Sidney.
"Black Beauty," by Anna Sewall.
"Huckleberry Finn," by Mark Twain.
"Treasure Island," by R. L. Stevenson.
"Trilby," by George DuMaurier.
"Pollyanna," by Eleanor Stewart.

I do not believe any new book has sold a million copies in so short a time as "Gone with the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell. The publishers agree that every copy of any book sold means five readers.

Through the centuries, the best sellers are usually the best books: The Bible, Shakespeare and the great classics.

Letters On The Court

Bad Precedent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One line of opposition to the President's plan to pack the Supreme Court is that it would furnish a bad precedent to some possibly dishonest administration of the future—by which is generally meant an administration of different political views from those of the persons who urge this consideration.

Are not such persons simply muddying the waters? The case for the President is not that his administration is so saintly as to deserve particular trust, but that any administration regularly elected by the people should be permitted to carry out its program without hindrance from another branch of the Government. The logic of this is perfectly clear. We have a Democratic form of government; ultimate authority rests with the people; the people enact laws through their representatives, over whom they have an automatic check at periods of from two to six years. But over the Supreme Court they have no check.

Let the present administration pack the court. Let the first administration of a different complexion re-pack it to suit itself. We could not logically deny them the right. Of course, when the court has been packed and unpacked several times the thing will be reduced to a manifest absurdity. Then public opinion will be prepared to deal realistically with the whole problem of judicial review of Congressional legislation.

Rooseveltian Philosophy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many people are criticizing the President for his recent attack on the judiciary and for his attempt to remodel what he considers an outmoded high tribunal. Their chief refutation at this time is that he is disregarding precedent (the precedent laid down by John Marshall in the famous Marberry vs. Madison case whereby the Supreme Court could invalidate Federal legislation) to satisfy the whims of his political ideals. Such action, they contend, is not only perilous to American democracy, but contrary to the ethics of good statesmanship.

In answering this charge, allow me to say the folowing: The Constitution specifically states in Section I, Article I of the original draft that all legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress composed of two houses. In Section 8, Article I, where it states the powers to be enjoyed by Congress, it says that Congress shall legislate to provide for the general welfare and that it shall also possess the right to make all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers. What could be more clear than this, that Congress shall make laws necessary in carrying out the general welfare of its people? That's democracy and you can't very well get away from it.

Nowhere in the Constitution from the preamble to the twenty-first amendment can there be found a clause where the high tribunal has any right to question the legislative authority of Congress. It is merely a matter of precedent just as the present policy of Mr. Roosevelt's to infuse the judiciary with new and enlightening blood. He believes that these men looking, as they are, at new ideas through old lenses receive such vision in a blurred light. Why should five men tell 25,000,000 voters what they don't want. That is the Rooseveltian philosophy and it is mine.

Two years ago our President was branded as the man who usurped the Constitution and the people's liberties by repudiating his pledge to protect it. Now he is doing it the constitutional way and they don't like that either. It just depends in the last analysis on who's doing it.

Hardened Minds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The violent reaction to the President's plan to liberalize the Supreme Court suggests newer educational method in the schools of today to prevent the hardening of our minds along with our sclerotic arteries.

In the economy of generations of several decades past, social and industrial changes took place so slowly that a man educated in the scientific, legal and social thinking and knowledges of the day could maintain his philosophy with little need for radical changes from the day of his diploma until the day of his epitaph.

Today, however, even the most stable of institutions by which society maintains collective endeavor with economy of effort, frequently becomes outmoded so rapidly as to become a positive impediment in the path of social progress. Then begins the battle of the ingrained human beneficiaries of the old order. Like feudal barons they resist the human demands of thousands for reason of vested interests in the property or prestige of the useless decadent institution.

Constitution A Rock.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir I'm little given to writing in criticism of political policies, but to my mind a crisis has arisen and it is time for every citizen to voice his sentiments.

It is hard for me to understand the attack upon our Constitution in general and upon the Supreme Court in particular, that has lately become the topic of the day. Don't we all consider America the foremost nation of the world? And what has made our country what it is? There can be but one America, its government and the institutions functioning under it. The Constitution has been the rock on which we have grown. And it has stood us in good stead in horse and buggy days and streamline car and plane days alike.

Why throw away our security to follow in the footsteps of European nations who have what?

"Disingenious."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the epithet "disingenuous," applied by Carter Glass to the Attorney General and by many others to the President's recent message, has gained a permanent place in our political vocabulary our broadcasters should try to pronounce it correctly. To confound it with the cognate but very different word "ingenious" is not an aid to clear thinking.

In the present instance, however, the error will not mislead us. Senator Glass' indictment was not only moral but intellectual. The Cummings address was neither very honest (ingenuous) nor very clever (ingenious)—and no single word seems to hit it off so well as this new hybrid born of ignorance and haste. It is indeed "disingenious."

A more curious inquiry into the matter would, I suspect, discover some inherent connection between political candor and intellectual ability of the first order. The man who is sure of himself and his principles does not need to be forever adroit and evasive; and he knows the ultimate futility of subterfuge and camouflage. But the mark of the mediocre mind is its unfaltering faith in these superficial strategies of the great game. Denied a deeper insight into the complex realities of life it revels in the pseudo-philanthropic and rushes in with gay abandon where wise men fear to tread.

And to this disingenious mediocrity we are now asked to entrust all we have and are!

The Approach.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Do the defenders of the Chief Executive think that they can befool the people, and hide them from what is really meant by this most untactful and disingenuous attack upon the Supreme Court?

I have no reason to suppose that I can pass upon the critical matter involved concerning the size or the make-up of the last resort for appeal in our land. I am only speaking of the approach which is being made to this matter by those who would rush to the rescue of the President. He has reason to pray: "Lord, save me from my friends; I can manage my enemies."

J. O. KNOTT.

Our "Moral Climate."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Roosevelt, in his second inaugural address, referred to the need in America of a new "moral climate." Mr. Roosevelt is wrong and not for the first time. America needs—not a new moral climate—but a return to the moral climate exemplified in the lives of Washington and Lincoln and expressed in words used to describe them.

America does not need the sort of moral climate exemplified in Mr. Roosevelt's own character and described in the phrases used to describe him and his methods—"suave," "indirect," "evasive," "subtle," "devious," "by subterfuge," "opportunist," "lust for power," "astute politician," "voluptuous pleasure in being dramatic," "aggressive," "ambitious," "audacious," "sensational," "clever."

Do we want a moral climate that can be described in such terms? The very word, "moral," is a contradiction of most of them. A suave moral climate? An evasive moral climate? An audacious moral climate? A clever moral climate? Do we want a politically astute moral climate? Or do we want a moral climate of rugged honesty, of simplicity, of straightforwardness, integrity and candor? America needs the moral climate of Washington and Lincoln—not of Franklin Roosevelt.

The Kick Against Oldsters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The birthday, February 11, of Thomas A. Edison, great inventive benefactor of mankind, calls to mind that he passed off at the very ripe old age of 83, and that he was a hard and successful worker up to the very end. One of his achievements long after reaching the age at which President Roosevelt insists that minds become senile and Justices of our Supreme Court should be scrapped, was a process for manufacturing rubber from goldenrod — an invention which might be the only means of saving this Nation, if in time of war we had no access to rubber regions of the tropics.

Obviously the real grievance in the President's mind about those "nine old men" of the Supreme Court is not their age, but that as umpires under the Constitution, they put restraint against dictatorial powers by Franklin Roosevelt. It was the NRA decision which first excited his wrath. Every one of the Justices must have incurred his displeasure, for their decision was unanimous. The so-called liberals as well as conservatives turned him down, the youngest as well as the oldest, and those who had been Democrats as well as Republicans.

HENRY D. BAKER.

Let The People Decide.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My objection to this so-called Supreme Court reform is its novelty and the apparent haste for its enactment. This novelty and this haste gives to the reform an appearance of evil. Without questioning the good motives of those in favor of this reform, it is well to remember that often the very appearance of error is quite as dangerous as the essence of error itself, and this is especially true when the point involved is the fundamental structure of our form of Government.

Should this reform, as it affects the personnel of the supreme bench, be enacted into law, it will certainly raise up very powerful and permanent opposition against it, and the very precedence of its enactment could and would be used to reverse it in the course of time and opportunity. Therefore, it would seem to me that this issue should be submitted to the people for their individual verdict independent of their representatives.

New Film Play At RKO-Keith's Is a Thriller

'Sea Devils' Is Dedicated to Coast Guard and Tells an Exciting Story.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SEA DEVILS." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Frank Wead, adapted to the screen by Mr. Wead, John Twist and P. J. Wolfson, starring Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster and Ida Lupino, with Donald Woods, Helen Flint, Pierre Watkin, Murray Alper and Billy Gilbert. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Reviewed Thursday afternoon.

There are combined in this serio-comic subject diverse elements of appeal. With a basic story of romance and rivalry for the hand of a beautiful young woman, "Sea Devils" also serves to accentuate the hazardous service rendered by the U. S. Coast Guard in protecting maritime property and saving human lives, jeopardized at sea.

The romantic aspects of the story contrived by former Lieut. Comdr. Frank Wead concern the rivalry for the hand of Doris Malone between Mike O'Shay and Steve Webb, both Coast Guardsmen. Miss Malone's father is a chief petty officer in the service with a medal to his credit for every year he has done his trick—"Medals" Malone he is called. "Medals" Malone is just a little jealous of his daughter's welfare and attempts to see to it that no unworthy suitor ever shall reach her affection. He deems O'Shay a renegade of the first water, having participated in a barroom brawl with him and been considerably banged up, as the saying is. Of Steve Webb he heartily approves.

Crisis Is Reached.

Then comes the business on the iceberg. A fight gets under way between O'hay and Malone and during the melee Steve is desperately hurt. Their boat is cut adrift and the Coast Guard thereby given its first opportunity to demonstrate with what efficiency it deals with such emergencies. But Steve dies as a result of his injuries and O'Shay is court-martialed and tossed into the brig for an indeterminate period. Malone reads himself out of the service, effective the following day.

At this puncture, hurricane warnings are posted and all Coast Guardsmen are summoned to emergency service. Malone forgets his retirement, O'Shay maneuvers his way out of the brig and the picture ends in a storm sequence that is almost too good to be true.

The ocean rolls a mile high, ships crack up on rocks, the breeches buoy is put into operation to save all the passengers aboard a stricken vessel and in other ways the functions of the Coast Guard are itemized to add melodramatic thrill to a yarn that may not be too convincing in some of its manifestations, but still is engrossing and exciting entertainment.

Trio of Stars.

The three principal roles are played by Victor McLaglen, as the hardboiled petty officer who finally sacrifices his life for the happiness of his daughter and the lad with whom he has battled all their lives. Preston Foster is handsomely cast in the role of O'Shay and Ida Lupino plays the girl in the case, who finally becomes Mrs. Mike O'Shay. Donald Woods is the Steve of the proceedings, an ambitious youngster, who gets all the worst of it and succumbs before his time to the injuries received in that battle on the iceberg.

Others of importance in the cast include Helen Flint, who performs with her accustomed acidity in the role of "Medals" Malone's inamorata; Pierre Watkins, as the commander, and Billy Gilbert, the rotund comic more familiar in short-reels than in features, as a policeman who exercises a sort of guardian-angelship over the life of Doris Malone.

Foremost among the supplementary features of the new bill which opened yesterday at RKO-Keith's is "The March of Time." This issue concerns itself with three interesting and comprehensively picturized subjects—the revival of the liquor business in the United States since repeal, the rehabilitation of Turkey under the dictatorship of the aging and fattening Metaspha Kemal Pasha, and the history of what has come to be known as "swing music," which is traced back to the original Dixieland Jazz Band, organized in New Orleans in 1916 and recently heard here on the stage of the Earle Theater as part of the headline act offered by Ken Murray.

The Pathe News, which deals interestingly with a considerable list of live current topics and an Oswald the Rabbit cartoon comedy, 'Everybody Sing"—and an unusually good one it is, too— are additional complements of a feature which is a trifle extravagant in some of its melodromatics, but still a subject that does credit to the branch of the Federal service which it celebrates, as well as to the members of the cast who strive so diligently to lend it the touch of authenticity that it only occasionally lacks.

The Dickstein Alien Actor Bill Is Assailed as An Inimical Piece of Legislation Injurious to Theater

Counsel for Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., Points Out Evils to Be Expected if Bill Is Passed; Jean Hersholt Is a Washington Visitor and Roscoe Ates, Also Here, Throws a Cocktail Party; A New Play Is on the Fire; Dr. Shyno Given Due; News Notes, Gossip of Theater.

THERE are merry goings-on these days up on Capitol Hill—all due to Representative Dickstein's ill-judged attempt to bar foreign actors from the American theater and cinema.

BELL.

The Dickstein alien actors bill, which seeks to bar foreign actors, would, if enacted, jeopardize artistic and earning opportunities for American actors and deprive American workers of jobs in crafts necessary to the production of American motion pictures, the House Immigration Committee this week was told by Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president.

It was pointed out by Mr. Hess that existing laws give adequate protection to American actors and artists and in no way diminish artistic and earning opportunities for native talent.

Statistics from eight of the largest American motion picture studios show that out of a total of 534 contract players, only 61 were foreigners admitted under visitors' visas or quota. Foreign actors represent approximately only 1-3000 of 1 per cent of the total number of studio employes, exclusive of extra talent. Of the 22,000 extras employed during 1936, it is believed that 90 per cent are American citizens.

The engagement of foreign stars for American motion pictures is fundamentally due to the interdependent aims of making the best productions for the American public and for successful distribution in the world markets.

If Representative Dickstein's bill were a law, we would not have had Gielgud's "Hamlet," Maurice Evans' "St. Helena" and "Richard II" and Beatrice Lillie and Reginald Gardiner would not be in "The Show Is On."

How would you like that? Neither would I.

Yes, that was Jean Hersholt you saw in the lobby of the Mayflower yesterday afternoon, although those were not his bags that were being lugged out to the shiny, new Ford V-8 with the Virginia license plates. He was merely seeing some friends off, or something. At least, that is what I am told. On his last visit the "Dr. Dafoe" of the films expressed a determination to come back at the earliest opportunity. This seems to have been it.

Announcement was made yesterday by Roland Robbins, manager of the new Trans-Lux Theater, nearing completion on Fourteenth street, from New York avenue to H street, that this new addition to Washington's amusement places will be formally dedicated under the auspices of the Women's Newspaper Club, Margaret Hart, president, on Friday, March 12, at 8:30 p. m.

With foremost representatives of Washington's official, diplomatic and social life invited to attend, the proceeds of the first performance will be devoted to the support of the endowed bed at Children's Hospital and the Newspaper Club's fellowship fund.

The first bill will consist, in part, of 50 minutes of "spot news" filmed in all parts of the world, supplemented by added short-reel subjects and special attractions contrived by the membership of the club.

The Trans-Lux will have a seating capacity of 600 and when opened to the general public on Saturday, March 13, will present 10 or 12 shows a day, running from 11 a. m., to the vicinity of midnight, with a special schedule for Sundays.

The opening night admissions are scaled a little high, but the nature of the entertainment and the object for which it is being presented will fully justify the tilted tariffs.

There is skill and magic in your hands." So wrote Rudy Vallee recently to Dr. Frank T. Shyne, first-aid to the theater in salvaging noted actors to the performance of their stage chores when they come to Washington out of health. Dr. Shyne's offices in the National Press Building with all of their infra-reds, ultra-violets, mechanical diagnosticians and other modern appliances for the scientific practice of drugless therapy, have made possible the public appearances of such notables of the theater as Walter Hampden, Jack Benny, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Dave Apollon, Edmund Lowe, Eddie Cantor, Lillian Roth, Jean Dixon, Charley Chase, Jackie Coogan and a host of others, when they thought they could not possibly "go on." All of this is duly celebrated in a recent issue of "We—Men of Washington," edited by Gustaf Fisher. It is no more than a fitting tribute to a helpful citizen who combines with his drugless therapy the knowledge of a graduate M. D., who also knows his materia medica. I know what I am talking about because he also has pulled both Eddie Melcher and me out of abyssmal slumps when the demands of the drama desks have been heavy.

When Leonard Bergman, executive administrator of the estate of the late Abe L. Erlanger, was in Washington over last week-end he made mention to your reporter that he had the script of a new play which he thought might do for metropolitan production. Yesterday, through the friendly offices of Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National Theater, controlled by the Erlanger estate, a copy of the manuscript play reached this desk and will be eagerly read over the week-end.

It is a dramatization by its original author of a successful short story. A report in full to Mr. Bergman and the readers of this column—if any—will be made not later than Monday morning. I beg of you, however, not to hold your breath in the meantime!

That supreme stammerer of the celluloids, Roscoe Ates, featured on the stage program at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning today, blew into town a day ahead of time yesterday and tossed a cocktail party in the lounge of the Mayflower between the hours of 5 and 6. It was a source of regret that owing to Mr. Meakin's preturbing penchant for opening his new bills out of turn we were unable to get there. A source of especial regret it was because Mr. Roscoe Ates is one of our favorite persons in show business. He has a sense of humor and a vast gift of companionship.

This is a slightly coy likeness of that amiable and completely staccato comedian, Roscoe Ates, who appears in a featured spot on the stage bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning today. Mr. Ates is remembered for many amusing screen impersonations and for at least two earlier personal appearances in the National Capital—at the Earle and at Loew's Palace.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 18.—"Second test," in Hollywood's private language, means second chance. Rare indeed the lucky actor who rates one. Of thousands who have failed at first opportunity, a mere handful were recalled for encores. Mae West, Greta Garbo, Fred MacMurray, Fred Astaire—they received second calls. It makes me shudder to think how close the industry came to losing them. And I often wonder how many others who failed to gleam through first tests might have been Astaires or Garbos had they been given other trials.

Fred MacMurray.

The industry is too slipshod with its tests. Studios will spend multi-thousands sending talent scouts to ur places, and will outbid one another for promising stage newcomers. Then they will hand over their young discoveries to broken down directors or embryonic assistants for testing. As a rule, little attention is given to wardrobe, lighting or camera, and less to script and the mental ease of the testee. He is lucky if he lives through the ordeal. He is a million times luckier if his test registers well.

There are exceptions to the rule of carelessness, notably Samuel Goldwyn. He insists that as much thought, workmanship and art go into a test as would go into a million dollar production. As a consequence, I have yet to hear of Goldwyn letting a find slip through his fingers. On the contrary, he is personally reputed to have unearthed as many potential stars as rival major companies. By way of proof, Lois Moran, Vilma Banky, Gary Cooper, Anna Sten, Ronald Colman, Merle Oberon, David Niven Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, and Frank Shields are a few who point to hi mas their "movie godfather."

Marian Marsh stood on the sidelines and watched Joe E. Brown go through a somewhat intricate scene with Corky, that heart-tugging, lop-eared pup that works in pictures for $150 a week. As the sequence ended Miss Marsh applauded and cried, "That dog is as smart as most actors." To which Joey cracked: "What do you mean, most actors?"

You hear nice and you hear mean things about Janet Gaynor. That is true of almost any actress who goes quietly about attending to her own business. I first knew her 13 years ago, and I thought then as I do now, that she is one of the swellest gals in town. A few days ago a young former stenographer playing her first picture bit (in Janet's picture) sat timorously on the far sidelines. I saw her, and mentioned to Miss Gaynor that the girl was probably scared to death.

"Poor kid!" exclaimed Janet. "Introduce us and I'll try to make her feel more at home. I know just how she feels."

When I left the set, Miss Gaynor and the newcomer were chair to chair, chatting like two members of Tuesday's Sewing Circle.

A few days ago Sir Guy Standing sold his famous Malibu Lake home. That becomes an important statement when you know the actor. For years this rustic cabin has been the apple of his eye. Far from Hollywood and far from the maddening crowd, it was a happy combination of garden, fishing, seclusion.

One morning Sir Guy's manservant broke into the master's room with the horrifying news that a car was overturned in the lake, directly below the house. Standing raced to the spot and he and the servant helped to push the wheels-up car to its side. Trapped underneath, drowned, were John Buckler (the actor) and his son, both dear friends. From the moment of the gruesome accident, Sir Guy's Edenesque estate became a bitter reminder. He had to leave.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Feb. 18.

JACK DELANEY'S window was broken by a man who's out on bail on a homicide charge. His counsel will use this newest escapade to try and prove his insanity . . . Hollywood's newest fad is the presenting of mausoleums and burial plots as birthday presents. The report is that Mrs. Joe E. Brown presented her husband with a little tomb which set her back a mere $39,000 . . . The latest addition to the Surrealist Art Exhibit shows a Green Woman, without any fingers and with long tubes instead of eyes, standing in a doorway. This weird painting was entitled, temporarily, "Woman Coming Through Door" . . . The exhibitors decided to change the title, and a new one has been selected. The new title, of all things, is "Chamberlain Brown Sent Me!"

WILL MORRISSEY again will be Billy Rose's general manager when the Rose troupe returns to the Fort Worth Centennial celebration . . . On the first night of the centennial debut, Rose tried to get into his private office and found the door locked. He finally was admitted and discovered Morrissey counting a huge pile of money, while two strangers stood nearby, with revolvers in their hands . . . "Who're these two guys?" Rose demanded . . . "Cops," Morrissey explained. "After all, there's $50,000 here, Billy. Why take chances?" . . . Rose turned to the policemen and said: "Listen. Never let me into this room again." He turned to go, pointed a finger at Morrissey and added: "And never let him out!"

VERA MILTON, the show girl, attended the premiere of "Yes, My Darling Daughter." She stopped in front of the stoutish Kelcy Allen and asked: "Can you take a very deep breath?" The critic asked, "Why?" Miss Milton replied: "So that I can pass!" . . . The music arrangers who were unionized now have discovered a hitch in the new setup. Instead of being employes, they've been told that the new arrangements describe them as "Contractors"—which means no Social Security and the loss of their group insurance benefits . . . The report on Del Casino's screen test for Darryl Zanuck states that the singer is a ringer for the late Russ Columbo. Casino and Columbo were cousins.

MAXIE BAER confided to friends that he decided to quit his comeback, when he found that he was outpointed by his shadow . . . Rio de Janiero has become the new Eldorado for American actors. Boatloads of veterans have been booked there to fill the demand . . . Shelton Brooks, who wrote "Some Of These Days" and "Darktown Strutters Ball," hadn't written another song for 20 years. This week, however, the 65-year-old Brooks completed "Rhythm Train." The lyrics are by his son, Shelton Brooks, jr. . . . That new Fred Fisher song, "Israel," which was published recently to capitalize on the theme of Max Reinhardt's "Eternal Road," actually was written 15 years ago. Addison Burkhart, co-author of the tune, died the other day—on the date when his first royalty check arrived.

A YOUNG actress employed by George Abbott informed him that she was retiring from the stage to be married: "I sometimes think," Abbott commented, "that marriage is an institution specially designed to absorb all the bad actresses in the theater" . . . Gilbert White, the artist-brother of Stanford White, sat with Banker Stewart H. Prosser in "21" and matched exploits of bravery. "I wore a derby hat in Texas," Prosser flaunted . . . White brushed back his William Jennings Bryan hairwave and affixed the monocle in his eye. "I wore this," he bragged—pointing to the monocle—"not only in Texas, but Oklahoma, too!"

"I READ your item," writes J. Edgar Hoover, "relative to the visit to Washington of Abe Lyman and his band, and the fact that all their hats were stolen.. I think I can tell you that inquiry shows that it was not a so-called legitimate theft. It was because Abe and his boys have so much S. A. that the fluttering hearts of the fairer sex no doubt wanted tokens by which they could remember Abe and his band. He and his boys should feel flattered that they were such Romeos in Washington."

ERNEST TRUEX attended a party last week at Robert Sinclair's home. There he heard the stage-folk rave about Garbo's performance in "Camille" and heard Sinclair opine that no greater Camille ever performed. "She's great, in the movies," Truex agreed, "but as for better Camilles—well, Bernhardt and Duse played that role on the stage" . . . When Sinclair pooh-poohed him, the stage-loving Truex shouted: "G'wan, you're a three-lettered word befinning with F" . . . "What? What's that?" Sinclair asked . . . Truex answered: "F-A-N."

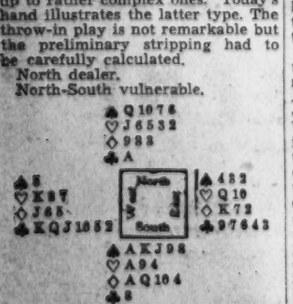
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

A Well Planned Strip Play.

Elimination and throw-in plays, like other special coups in bridge, can range from very simple varieties up to rather complex ones. Today's hand illustrates the latter type. The throw-in play is not remarkable but the preliminary stripping had to be carefully calculated.

North dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣
3 ♠	3 ♣	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♠	5 ♣	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South would have been well pleased after North's negative response to the four diamond asking bid to rest at four spades, but East's defensive call of five clubs prohibited this. South felt that his partner's free raise, even though he had passed originally, made a five-spade contract fairly safe, and, rather than accept what might turn out to be a small penalty from non-vulnerable opponents, went after his own vulnerable game.

After West had opened the club King, and the dummy was laid down, South saw that he would have to be both lucky and careful to avoid the loss of at least three tricks.

Since dummy's entries were extremely limited, declarer did not make the error of wasting the club Ace entry, and immediately took a diamond finesse to the ten-spot. West won with the Jack, and sensing the danger of a club continuation shifted to a spade. Declarer ending in the dummy. A second won, and drew the adverse trumps, ending in the dummy. A second diamond finesse against the King was successful, and declarer now played out all of his diamonds, discarding a heart from dummy on the fourth one. Now, with clubs and diamonds stripped from the North-South hands, the Ace and a low heart were led.

On the second round, the opponents were helpless to avert disaster. West could not go up with his King, because to do so would drop his partner's Queen, so he ducked. But East on lead with the heart Queen had no choice but to return a club, declarer discarding his losing heart while dummy ruffed.

It is true that South would have been better advised to have doubled five clubs than to have reached for five spades, but his masterly play justified his optimism.

3 in D. C. Car Are Injured in Virginia Crash

Collision Near Fredericksburg Also Hurts Driver of Other Auto.

The injured are Samuel Taylor, 32, of 1433 Columbia road northwest; Mrs. Virginia Armstrong, 38, of 1433 Columbia road northwest, and Jack Fields, 17, of 3711 Eighteenth street northwest.

In Martha Washington Hospital, where the victims were taken, physicians said Taylor's back was injured; Mrs. Armstrong was severely shocked and Fields' back was sprained. In addition to the District residents, R. E. Duval, engineer for the highway department at King George, Va., driver of the other car, was severly cut and bruised.

Overturned in Ditch.

Following the crash, the car in which the Washingtonians rode, driven by Taylor, was said to have hurtled Duval's car and landed upside down in a ditch.

Joseph H. Higgs, 747 Tenth street southeast, was absolved from blame in the death of Mrs. Annie M. Eslin, 74, B street northeast. The jury held Mrs. Eslin's death was due to her own carlessness.

The elderly woman died in Emergency Hospital Tuesday after she was struck by a street car at Twelfth and F streets northwest, during the height of a snowstorm.

Hold Boy's Death Accident.

In the second death directly attributed to the snow, the jury decided that David L. Waple, 18, 1627 Hobart street northwest, died as a result of an accident.

Arthur E. Bingler, 28, 323 First street northeast, a taxicab driver, was exonerated in Waple's death when witnesses testified the youth ran head on into Bingler's car while coasting on Klingle street, near the Klingle Bridge. Waple was pronounced dead on arrival in Mount Alto Hospital Tuesday night.

In the third inquest, Douglas C. Reid, 32, 609 Morton place northeast, was released from any further police action due to the death of Arthur Jordan, colored, 39, 1529 Vermont avenue northwest.

Jordan died in Freedman's Hospital February 9. His death was judged accidental by the jury.

Ruby Robinson, 12, of 1538 B street northeast, suffered a possible fractured jaw and skull late yesterday when she was struck by an automobile on Fifteenth street, between B and C streets northeast. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Founder of D. C. Hotel Supply Business Retired 6 Years Ago.

Edward Beckley Adams, 67, who founded E. B. Adams & Co., dealers in hotel supplies and household furniture, died yesterday at his home, 103 Leland street, Chevy Chase, Md., after a long illness.

Mr. Adams, former president of the firm, was active in the Capital City Chess Club. Several years ago he was chess champion of the city. Adams sold his interest in the firm when he retired in 1931.

The former businessman was a member of the Columbia Country Club, the Racquet Club and the Civitan Club. He was a former president of the Retail Credit Men's Association.

Survivors are his widow, Mrs. Sarah Godman Adams; three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Bowie and Miss Sarah Margaret Adams, both of this city, and Mrs. Ruth Patton, of Englewood, N. J.; two sons, Edward G. and Donald H. Adams, of this city; a brother, William Adams, and a sister, Miss Margaret Adams, both of Baltimore, and six grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the Adam's residence. Burial will be at Woodlawn Cemetery, Baltimore, Md.

Chief Assistant To Stalin Dies

Moscow, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—G. K. Ordzhonikidze, 60, commissar of heavy industry and Dictator Joseph Stalin's "right-hand" man, died here tonight.

Ordzhonikidze, a great admirer of American technique and efficiency, was largely responsible for building and operating the factories, hydro-electric stations and blast furnaces which showly are transforming Russia from a feudal agricultural state into a modern industrial nation.

As the country's "big business head" he held a position of power only second to that of Stalin in Russia's industrial life.

Neutrality Stand Is Given by Hull

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull said yesterday the State Department was favorably disposed to greater discretionary power for the President in administering neutrality laws as against mandatory and inflexible rules.

He refused to commit the State Department to any of the neutrality bills now before Congress, but told newsmen at his press conference the department had leaned consistently toward legislation giving the President discretion in neutrality matters.

At a Congressional neutrality hearing, Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, said he was told former Congresswoman Jeanette Rankin had tried to arrange meetings of Congressmen on the neutrality issue and had invited Representative Kloeb (Democrat), of Ohio, a Foreign Affairs Committeeman to attend one.

Miss Rankin replied she had acted at the request of a Congressman whom she did not identify and that she felt she had been co-operative.

6 Dead, 10 Hurt In Gun Blast On Battleship

The fighting force's war game—known officially as Fleet Landing Exercise No. 3—was carried out in deepest secrecy. A ring of 100 ships kept the maneuvers from public view. But throughout the exercise battle planes skirted the coast cities and residents felt the rumble of the guns.

There were 3,700 Marines, about half of whom came through the Panama Canal from their Quantico base just for the exercise. There were 750 Army troops from Fort Lewis, Wash., and the Presidio, of San Francisco.

It was the job of the Army and the Marines to land in the surf from small Navy boats full panoplied for war, and take field pieces, rations and fighting equipment ashore.

Many Ships in Action.

Admiral Hepburn disclosed 4 heavy cruisers, 5 battleships, 2 divisions of destroyers, some naval auxiliary ships and 70 Marine Corps planes engaged in the landing exercise.

All the other ships of the fleet, some 100 in number, were out in the same vicinity in tactical and gunnery exercises during the four days.

Ever since the British fiasco at Gallipoli during the World War, landing operations have been the study of naval experts the world over. Naval strategists point out that with the extensive coastlines of the United States, its territories and island possessions, this particular problem of coast defense is one of the vital military problems of the Nation.

Trumble Brilliant Officer.

Capt. Edward John Trumble, who was killed yesterday when a 5-inch gun exploded on the battleship Wyoming, was regarded as one of the most brilliant young officers in the United States Marine Corps.

A resident of Alexandria, where his young wife and his mother mourned him last night, Trumble joined the Marine Corps in 1920 as an enlisted man. He took a competitive examination and won an appointment to the Naval Academy the next year.

He was an honor man at Annapolis and No. 1 man of the 25 graduates who joined the Marine Corps in 1925. His nickname at the academy was "Red," a sobriquet that became "Rojo"—Spanish for red—when he campaigned in Nicaragua.

Nicaraguan Academy.

It was in Nicaragua that Capt. Trumble won credit for an oustanding achievement. He had gone there in 1929, at a time when Sandino was on the warpath. He took part in several skirmishes in the Somotilla province and was decorated by the Nicaraguan government with the Medaille de Merito. It was for another undertaking, however, that he won most praise—the establishment of a military academy in Nicaragua.

The American Government planned ultimately to withdraw all marines. But first it wanted to assure Nicaragua of a sufficient number of trained native officers. Capt. Trumble was selected to found the local military academy. Taking the regulations of Annapolis and West Point, he selected what he regarded as most suitable, had them translated into Spanish and the started the Nicaraguan military school.

Was Stationed Here.

Capt. Trumble's first assignment after leaving Annapolis took him to the Marine Corps basic school at Philadelphia. Later he went to Wakefield, Mass., with a Marine rifle team. In 1927-28 he was in China, and upon his return he was stationed here at the Marine Barracks, where he taught a class of noncommissioned officers. Thereafter he went to Nicaragua.

Returning here early in 1933, he was assigned to the judge advocate's office in the Navy Department. While so detailed he took up the study of law at George Washington University. He was graduated last June and, after being admitted to the Virginia bar, took command of the Marine detachment aboard the Wyoming.

Capt. Trumble was born in Charlestown, Md., May 3, 1902, the son of the late Edward J. Trumble and Mrs. Trumble. The latter is now Mrs. Edgar Padgett, of 1413 King street, Alexandria.

In November, 1933, his first year at George Washington Law School, Capt. Trumble married Mary Ellen Ellington. Last night she was at the home of Mrs. Padgett, her mother-in-law. Besides these two, the young officer is survived by a sister, Mrs. G. G. Tomlin, of Alexandria.

600 to Attend Jewish Youths' Meeting Here

4-Day Conference Slated to Start Today; Hebrew Leaders to Speak.

More than 600 delegates from the Young People's League of the United Synagogue of America will gather here for a four-day conference starting today, with headquarters at the Willard.

From every part of the United States and Canada young Jews will join in a youth movement "which marks a turning point in the life of the Young People's League," according to Irving Nusbaum, of Washington, convention chairman.

"About 50,000 Jewish young people are ready to go forward to strengthen those ideals on which the peace and happiness of humanity depends," he said. "American youth should look to their respective faiths for the guidance which will help them advance humanity.

"Prominent authorities and leaders of Jewish life," he continued, "will be here to deliver addresses and to lead the various discussion groups." Sightseeing and two dances are included in the program.

Notables Attend Tea Given by Mrs. Hurja

Guests See the Memorable Andrew Jackson Collection of New Dealer; Furnishings From Orient.

By Dudley Harmon.

Invitations to Mrs. Emil Hurja's party yesterday afternoon modestly read "a small tea." But the rooms were jammed with guests whose names would read like an official and diplomatic "Who's Who;" William, the famous factotum who calls cars at important receptions, was present, and altogether it was one of the largest teas given in a private home since the beginning of Lent.

Mr. and Mrs. Hurja were among the first "New Dealers" to move to Georgetown. Their yellow brick residence at 1409 Thirtieth street is entered through a charming courtyard at one side. The dining room is on the first floor, the drawing room on the second. The latter is reached by a narrow staircase, the ceiling of which is so low that many a tall and dignified diplomat yesterday had to stoop to keep from bumping.

On the walls at the head of the stairway hang old prints and documents belonging to Mr. Hurja's collection on Andrew Jackson relics, his favorite hobby. One picture, a political broadside used in his Administration, had rather a familiar look and guests recognized it as one used by the Hurjas as a Christmas card last season. They found it in a little shop in Stockholm, of all places.

Screen from Orient.

In the dining room is a large Chinese screen of green and gold in subdued hues which the Hurjas brought back with them from the Orient when they attended the inauguration of President Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth. A low lacquered table, another souvenir of the trip, is in the drawing room upstairs.

There were almost as many men as women at yesterday's tea, a situation rare enough in Washington to come under the heading of news. Among the many guests were the Greek Minister, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, who was describing his newly acquired El Greco to art-minded friends; the German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther; the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Monthe de Morgenstierne, and Donna Matilde de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador, one of the few women there not in black. She wore a gray coat of Persian lamb and a small hat of the same material.

Mrs. Sheppard Attends.

Others there were Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard, in black crepe and pearls (Mrs. Hurja also wore black with tiny pink roses at the neck of her chiffon frock); Mrs. Lewis Caldwell, an early arrival, and former Representative and Mrs. Fred Britten.

Mrs. Morris Clark had on the smartest hat of the afternoon—in fact, one might almost say of the month. Made of taffeta gaily striped in red and blue, it exactly matched her scarf. She and Mr. Clark were accompanied by the latter's cousin, Mrs. Evelyn Bailey.

Other guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton with her daughter, Stellita, both in black with furs; Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mme. Troyanovsky with the Soviet Ambassador, the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senator Hector Leguizamon, Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General, and Mrs. George Marye.

Soviet Embassy Marks Pushkin Anniversary

The Ambassador spoke on the creative genius of Pushkin and members of the Embassy staff recited works of the poet in Russian, English, French, German, Italian, Jewish and Chinese.

Anita B. Dunlap To Be Married To Dr. Simonton

Nancy Brunner to Be Bride of F. W. Curtis in Rites on April 3.

Several weddings have been announced to take place in the next few weeks.

Miss Anita Brunet Dunlap, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Dunlap, has chosen March 30 as the date for her wedding to Dr. Kinsey M. Simonton, who is associated with the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. The ceremony will take place at the Church of the Epiphany, the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips officiating.

Miss Dunlap will have as her matron of honor and only attendant, Mrs. Archie Burgess. Dr. George Hutto will be best man, and the ushers will be Dr. Benjamin Golden, Dr. Frank Klune, Dr. Thomas Collins, Dr. Thomas Quill, Mr. Cecil O'Day and Mr. Archie Burgess.

Another wedding which will also take place at Epiphany is that of Miss Nancy Brunner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic J. Brunner, who will be married April 3 at 3 o'clock to Mr. Frederick Whiting Curtis. Mrs. James A. Schroeder, sister of the bride-to-be, will be matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Leona Yoder, cousin of Miss Brunner, and Miss Sally Curtis, sister of Mr. Curtis. Miss Kathleen Schroeder, niece of the bride-to-be, will be flower girl.

The ushers will be Dr. Hazen Shea, Mr. John Coulton, Mr. John Strauss, Mr. William Shoemaker, Mr. James A. Schroeder, jr., brother-in-law of the bride, and Mr. Meigs Brearley. The Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills, rector of the Church of Our Saviour, will officiate.

Training Ship To Visit U. S.

There are gay times in Washington when the ships come in—training ships and submarines from the navies of sister nations bringing officers and midshipmen who are entertained at a round of parties in Washington.

Just now members of Capital society are busy extending a welcome to officers of the Dutch submarine, O-16, which is paying an official visit to Washington. News that the French training ship, "Jeanne d'Arc" is coming to Baltimore about March 21, means plans will soon be made for entertaining the French visitors when they arrive.

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable have left for Haiti, Santo Domingo and Cuba, where Capt. Sable will meet the training ship. They expect to return to Washington and be in Baltimore when the ship arrives there.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Jane Ramseyer is one person who simply flies through her studies at G. W., without any trouble whatsoever. Her latest is to pull down a "report card" with five A's. That speaks for itself.

* * * *

Not so long ago, Secretary Woodring and young Representative Byron Scott, of California, were standing side by side at a large social gathering. A semi-circle of smiling listeners was enjoying stories. Finally after one particularly amusing anecdote, when the merriment had quieted down, the Secretary started in on a series of most complimentary comments on the young politician. Tall, blue-eyed and prematurely gray, Mr. Scott teetered back and forth on his heels and toes, enjoying it all. Then the Secretary began singing praises of Mr. Scott's home State, much to the surprise of listeners who knew that, although Mr. Woodring says nice things about all parts of the country, when he starts actually raving about a State, it usually turns out to be his own Kansas. This particular occasion was no exception, for the young Representative originally hailed from the Sunflower State and only recently went to California.

* * * *

And now Mrs. Louis Schapiro has told on her son, Mark. It seems that this young gentleman has very decided likes and dislikes about everything and once he makes up his mind it cannot be changed. There are times in all lives when a good excuse is a valuable asset, but hard to find. Not so with Mark. He is always ready with the answer either that he has very demanding studies, or has to visit the barber.

* * * *

Margaret McMullen and Ted Wingo, who will be wed sometime in the spring—April, to be more exact, are making weekly excursions to Gibson Island in an effort to find a house for the summer. They now know each house and all of its little tricks, but are no nearer a decision.

* * * *

Lightning may never strike twice in the same spot, but appendectomies do. Not long ago Luis Castillo Najera, young son of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, was rushed to the hospital, where he grudgingly spent several weeks. Now, he is no sooner back home and up and out again than his cousin, Lupe Davilla, who is visiting her uncle and aunt, is stricken, having gone to Casualty Hospital yesterday. Her friends, of whom there are many, are wishing her a very speedy recovery.

* * * *

Christine Gawne, with her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Gawne, having decided to make their home in Washington, are now in the throes of "unsettling" their old home down in Augusta, Ga., and packing the furniture off up here. One doesn't feverishly dismantle and crate things down South. No, indeed, everything is carried out with the utmost ease and comfort and guests are even entertained during the moving process. The William E. Pearsons, who are taking a leisurely trip through the warmer climes, are planning to stop off and visit the Gawnes. But, knowing them, it will not be a time of stopping in the midst of work and entertaining, because they will pitch right in and help finish things up in a hurry. Then together they all hope to go on to Sea Island for a breathing spell before again heading their cars toward Washington.

Gay Party Celebrates Egyptian Envoy's Honor

Youssef Bey Receives Congratulations From Throng of Friends on His New Title; Guests Entertained With Dancing.

By Lynda Reeve.

Last evening in the midst of bright lights, gay chatter and a profusion of colorful blossoms—all gifts from fellow-diplomats—the Minister of Egypt, Mohamed Amine Youssef Bey, received the congratulations of his friends upon the title recently bestowed upon him by King Farouk I.

The handsome legation on Sheridan Circle was ablaze with lights and its red-carpeted halls and luxuriously furnished salons were filled with merry groups. The party was arranged at the last moment, as the news of the appointment did not arrive until two days ago and the festivity had t otake place between then and yesterday, as the minister leaves today for two months on a trip to Florida and California.

The guests greeted their host in the drawing room, at one end of which there was a "bar" with several kinds of refreshing beverages. In the central salon there was dancing, and at the other side of the house, in the dining room, there was a long buffet table centered with an effective arrangement of white tulips, rose snapdragons and yellow daffodils. Around this were platters of ham, turkey, salads and special Egyptian delicacies.

Among the first to arrive were the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Daniel C. Roper, who was one of the first in this country to meet Youssef Bey when he arrived here two years ago, and Mrs. Roper, who was costumed in white ripple satin fashioned with an emerald green velvet scarf effect that fell into a long train; Mrs. Clarence Grosner, in a vivid floral print; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, she wearing a gown of black and silver brocade, designed with draped sleeves; the Air Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Puga, the latter wearing white crepe studded with rhinestones and with a halter collar of the brilliants.

Others seen dancing were Miss Patricia Brewer, in black taffeta embroidered with large green coin dots; the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Don Luis Quintanilla, and his sister, Senorita Lutecia Quintanilla, costumed in blackened ribbed satin; Mr. and Mrs. William Bride, jr., she in black net fashioned with a full skirt and bands of ruffles around the shoulders; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, the latter in white crepe trimmed with rhinestones, and Mr. Dwight Kendall and Miss Bette Hartz, she in black velvet and taffeta, with a large red flower on one shoulder.

Also attending the party were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, she in black taffeta with a scarf-train effect of yellow and orange-flowered chiffon; the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrious Sicilianos, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rizik, Mr. and Mrs. Ayoub Rizik, Mr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, the latter in coral lace; the Financial Counselor of the Hungarian Legation and Mrs. Boncescu, she attired in orchid satin; Mrs. George G. Kirkpatrick, wearing a frock of spring-printed crepe; Mr. and Mrs. Barge L. Hartz, Mrs. J. D. Kendall, in white crepe trimmed with silk fringe; Mrs. Popovici, wearing a gown of silver satin and a short sable cape; Miss Helene Kravatz, in black with touches of red, white and blue on her frock, and wearing flowers of the same colors in her hair; Miss Helen Befry, Mr. Richard Montgomery, Mrs. Katharyn Fuqua, wearing a tailored frock of alternating strips of black net and velvet; Miss Diane Smith, in red crepe dotted with small white figures; Miss Vera Bloom, wearing French blue brocade; Mr. Kenneth Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Zoulfikar, she in a French gown of honey crepe designed with an intricate arrangement of draped peplum and a belt of gold kid; the Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, and their two daughters, Mrs. Richard Eglinton and Senorita Eleanor Campbell; Mr. and Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. Margaret Kyle, Mr. Rodney Kenner, Dr. and Mrs. Irving Brotman, she in black crepe made on simple lines, and Mrs. James P. McKane.

Mr. Auiz Azer, of the legation staff, was busy throughout the evening seeing that the guests enjoyed themselves.

Georgia Society to Give Colonial Ball Tonight

The Georgia State Society will hold a Colonial ball in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel tonight. Dancing will be from 9:30 until 1. All attending have been urged to dress in costume.

Prizes will be given for the most attractive costume and the most graceful waltz. Mr. Clark Cole, third chairman of the floor committee will be assisted by Lieut. Col. Whelchel, Col. and Mrs. B. H. Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Twitty, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Worthy, Mr. Lacy Hinely, and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Grayson.

Arnolds Honor Author-Relative For First Novel

Justice Department Official, Wife Entertain for Olga Moore.

The Special Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold entertained last evening at an informal buffet supper at their home on Garfield street. The affair was in the nature of a celebration of the publication of "Wind Swept," the first novel of the well-known writer, Olga Moore, who in private life is Mrs. Carl Arnold, wife of the Assistant General Counsel of the Department of Communications and a sister-in-law of the host.

Present at the supper from out of town were Mrs. Thurman Arnold's sister, Mrs. Royal A. Hauer, of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Miss Loueva Longan, of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and Mrs. Ralph Greenlee, of Chicago, who has been visiting her son at Yale.

The supper was served at a long refectory table in the dining room which had a bouquet of spring flowers as a centerpiece and was lighted with tall green tapers. The hostess wore a gown of red broacaded taffeta, and Miss Moore a black frock of the same material.

Among the other guests in the company were Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Wightman who are here from Honolulu, Dr. and Mrs. John Muffbaun, of Laramie, Wyo.; Mr. and Mrs. William O. Douglass, Mr. Francis M. Cockrell, Mr. Stuart Guthrie, Mr. John Wilkinson, Mr. James Quigley Newton and Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover.

Miss Tillman, Robert Thach Are Married

Bride Is Granddaughter of Late Senator From South Carolina.

Of interest to Washington society was the wedding yesterday of Miss Douschka Pickens Tillman, daughter of Mrs. Lucy P. Dugas, of Washington, to Mr. Robert Thach, of Washington and New York, vice president and chief attorney for Pan-American Airways. The bride is a granddaughter of the late Senator Ben Tillman of South Carolina.

The ceremony was performed by Justice F. Dickinson Letts in his chambers at the District Court House and was attended only by members of the immediate families. After the ceremony Mr. Thach and his bride left by airplane for a wedding trip in the West Indies. On their return they will reside at the Shoreham.

Mr. Thach served with Gen. John J. Pershing in the Mexican expedition of 1916 and went to France with the American Expeditionary Forces. He was made a major in the Air Service, was decorated with the rosette of the French Legion of Honor and was also decorated by the United States Government for his services.

Bankheads Honored by State Group

Flowers Come by Plane From Louisiana Home of Rep. Mouton.

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead were guests of honor last night at a large dinner given by the Alabama State Society at the Willard Hotel.

Flowers, which Representative Robert L. Mouton, of Louisiana, had sent by plane from the gardens at his home for the occasion, predominated in the decorations. They were azaleas, japonicas and Southern smilax. Mrs. Bankhead also wore a corsage of white camelia japonicas on one shoulder of her gown of white and silver lame. On her head, she had a coronet of brilliants.

Many Congressmen Present.

With the guests of honor at the head table, sat the president of the society, Mr. Edwin McDowell, and Mrs. McDowell; Senator and Mrs. Hugo L. Black, the Majority Leader of the House, Representative Sam Rayburn; the chairman of the Rules Committee, Representative John J. O'Connor; the Chaplain of the House and Mrs. James S. Montgomery; former Representative and Mrs. Charles West, the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. Jesse Jones, former Representative Miles C. Allgood, L. L. Patterson and W. B. Oliver, of Alabama, and present members of the Alabama delegation in Congress, with the exception of Senator and Mrs. John H. Bankhead, who are out of the city.

Among those of the Alabama delegation was Representative and Mrs. Sam Hobbs, who had with them another guest of honor, Miss Cornelia Morgan, daughter of the late Senator John T. Morgan, who was an esteemed member of the Senate for many years. Mrs. Hobbs wore a gown of flesh-colored lace and Miss Morgan was in black lace. Also in the delegation were Representative and Mrs. Lister Hill, Representative and Mrs. Joe Starnes, Representative Henry Steagall, Representative and Mrs. Pete Jarman, Representative and Mrs. Luther Patrick, Representative and Mrs. John Sparkman and Representative and Mrs. Frank W. Boykin, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Frances Boykin. Mrs. Boykin was in blue velvet and her daughter wore a bouffant frock of white moire taffeta figured in large red poppies.

Representative O'Connor Speaks.

Among other guests in the large company were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Owen, nephew and niece of the Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead; Representative Mouton, Mrs. Lucille McMillan, of the Civil Service Commission; Mr. and Mrs. Julien Friant, Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Barnes, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. William E. Fort.

The program included talks by the Speaker, Representative O'Connor and Representative Rayburn and a group of songs by Mrs. Mary Knox Willett, accompanied by the orchestra which later played for dancing. Mrs. Bankhead was introduced by Senator Black. There was also a message from President Roosevelt, brought by former Representative West.

Visits Planned By Mrs. Keyes

The chance mention of the name of a leading New York department store in "Honor Bright," Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes' recent novel, will mean added funds for the Red Cross flood relief.

The store has invited Mrs. Keyes to be guest of honor at a tea and reception next Thursday afternoon, at which she will autograph copies of her book, the proceeds from the sale of the novel on that occasion to be given to the Red Cross fund, by the store.

Mrs. Keyes is leaving tonight for Boston for a brief visit with her mother, Mrs. William Taisey, and will go from there with her son, Mr. Henry Keyes, aboard a snow train to their home, Pine Grove farm, near Haverhill, N. H., on the Connecticut River. Former Senator Keyes is spending the winter there. Mrs. Keyes will remain until Wednesday when she will leave for New York to be present for the "Honor Bright" reception. Thursday evening she will attend a theater party and she expects to return to Washington on Saturday.

State Society to Meet.

The midwinter party of the Wisconsin State Society will be held tomorrow evening at 1333 Sixteenth street. Members of the executive committee of the society will form the reception group and there will be cards and dancing to the music of the Carolinians.

Replica of George Washington Room Nearly Completed, C. A. R. Reveals

The question of what type of bowl and pitcher was used in 1732 in the room in which George Washington was born in Wakefield was debated yesterday morning by a committee, of which Mrs. John Morrison Kerr is chairman.

The replica of the room in which George Washington was born has been completely furnished with the exception of the bowl and pitcher, it was revealed at the meeting of the board of management of the Children of the American Revolution. Even the Rockefeller group that restored Williamsburg is still undetermined on just what type of bowl and pitcher should be added to the furniture of the room.

Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair presided at the meeting yesterday.

Mrs. William Henry Wagner, the registrar, presented a list of 154 new members to be voted. Mrs. Lee Pennington, the organizing secretary reported eight new presidents appointed for new societies and 13 reappointed.

The board recommended for consideration of the convention a provision for reinstatement of delinquent members.

Contributions were recorded for the suppor of the C. A. R.'s wards at the Southern mountain schools of Tamassee, S. C., Kate Duncan Smith in Alabama and Croosnore in North Carolina. The society received a gift of 15 volumes of the D. A. R. Magazine.

St. Gertrude's Guild is sponsoring the series of lectures to be given for the benefit of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts, by Dr. J. Edward Reuth, assistant professor of psychology at Catholic University and codirector of the Child Welfare Center, at the Carlton Hotel March 8, 12 and 19.

The lecture committee of the St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts in charge of the program is Mrs. Frank Slingluff, jr., chairman; Mrs. Francis Xavier Callahan and Mrs. Pere A. Wilmer.

Officers of the St. Gertrude's Guild are: Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, president; Mrs. Raymond Francis Garrity, treasurer; Mrs. Augustus E. Giegengack, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Francis X. Callahan, recording secretary.

The national committee on the Cause and Cure of War will meet in Washington March 2, 3 and 4 to discuss plans for the future work of the committee.

Under the leadership of Miss Josephine Schain, of New York, chairman, a series of meetings will be held in the Garden House of the Dodge Hotel here.

The program outlined includes on March 2 a general discussion of the "Future of the Cause and Cure of War," and a conference on trade treaties and a conference with the women's joint congressional committee.

On March 3 the women who will represent the 11 national organizations affiliated with the national committee on Cause and Cure of War, including the American Association of University women, General Federation of Women's Clubs, national board of the Y. W. C. A., National Council of Jewish Women, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and the National League of Women Voters will discuss neutrality. On the afternoon of March 3 the women plan to visit their Congressmen and discuss pending legislation along lines of peace legislation. On March 4 they will discuss our relations with South America.

The Writers League elected the following officers at their annual business meeting this week. Mrs. L. W. Tilton, president; Mrs. D. W. Thayer, vice president; Miss Gladys Garraway Smith, secretary and publicity. A prize for diligence in sending out manuscripts was awarded to Miss Ivy Lindsley and the meeting adjourned after the presentation of a humorous article on life in a sanitorium by Mrs. Elizabeth Aldrich, and an account of English customs, by Miss Margaret Jean Bailey.

A short-short story contest with 1,500 words maximum, is due April 8. Poetry, with 32 lines maximum is due May 13. Members may submit one entry to each contest.

The league will meet at Thomson School Thursday. A program will be given by Miss Anna Priestly, Mrs. Tilton, Mrs. Thayer, Mrs. Marshall and Mr. Simond.

Prof. David Lumsden will speak on "English Gardens, Both Formal and Informal," at the meeting of the Bethesda Community Garden Club to be held Wednesday morning in Battery Park Community House.

The president, Mrs. Benjamin T. Elmore, has announced the appointment of the following committee chairmen: Hostesses, Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle; program, Mrs. Arthur J. Hilland; membership, Mrs. Eugene Ferry Smith, Mrs. Reginald Looker, and Mrs. John A. Dickinson, and spraying, Mrs. L. E. Luce and Mrs. Frank J. Holliday.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Who Pays the Hotel Bill When College Man Invites His Out-of-Town Girl Friend to Week-end Dance?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I realize you are not conducting a column on etiquette. Nevertheless I would appreciate your opinion on a question of etiquette which I believe has broad social implications. I assure you there are many besides myself who will read your reply with interest. A recent week-end was the occasion of a dance at the university which I am attending here in Washington. I invited a young lady from out-of-town to be my guest.

• • • •

At the close of the week-end, this girl plainly showed that she had no intention of paying her hotel bill. I paid the bill without protest, of course, but a certain feeling of tension and embarrassment could not be avoided. Entertaining this girl for nearly three days, in addition to buying all her meals, required a considerable expenditure and it seems to me that I should not have been called upon to pay for her lodgings as well.

• • • •

Opinion among my men acquaintances at school seems to be divided as to whether the girl was justified in expecting me to pay her hotel bill. Some of the fellows paid their guests' hotel bills for the week-end and others did not. We would like to have your opinion in the matter, are looking forward anxiously for your reply and wish to thank you for it now. Sincerely yours, DONALD Y.

• • • •

The Majority Opinion.

DEAR DONALD Y.: I have been doing some research of my own since receiving your letter and from what I gather your week-end guest for the university dance was following a rather widely observed custom in permitting you to pay her hotel bill. And I admit the discovery comes as something of a shock to me—a shock, perhaps I should explain, in the sense of being very surprising. Had the young lady written me in advance of coming, asking whether or not she should expect or permit you to pay her week-end expenses, I should have said "No!" I should have told her to buy a round-trip ticket in advance, and to come financially prepared and mentally determined to pay for her lodgings and breakfasts.

• • • •

However, men and women recently graduated from some of the leading institutions of higher learning in the East, whom I have consulted in this matter, have assured me it is a prevalent campus theory that girls should count and men should insist on the latter's paying all expenses incident to such week-end engagements. Therefore, we must assume the girl was acting in complete good faith in referring her hotel bill to you for settlement. It is possible she thought you sadly lacking in savoir-faire, and miserly to boot; in permitting tension and embarrassment to creep into your manner when you sensed her expectation. She may have felt miserably embarrassed and wished herself dead or a thousand miles away when she realized your attitude; but unable to do anything about it except let you pay for the reason that she hadn't enough money in her purse to do otherwise.

• • • •

On the other hand, if she possessed average gumption, she would have brought an emergency fund with her, in case you did not explicitly state at the time of extending your invitation that of course she understood you would see to her lodgings.

I am told that where college men are not financially able to meet their visiting girls' hotel bills, they usually make arrangements for her to put up at a sorority house, or at some campus boarding house, or secure for her an invitation to the home of a friend in town. At some colleges it is customary for fraternity men to move out of their fraternity houses on festive week-ends, to provide quarters for the girls, or they turn over a part of the house to the girls, and install a hostess to look after the feminine guests.

• • • •

The real offenders, if there are any, are yourself, for not knowing the custom of your contemporaries, and the girl's parents or social mentors, for permitting her to stray from the protective confines of the most formal, ethical, social procedure, which would never countenance a young girl's staying at a hotel at a young man's expense under any pretext whatsoever. M. H.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Microscopy, Chemistry.

The most important part of the practice of medicine is the humble task of observation and ministration at the bedside. Such work is an art, but an art based on science. And to raise it above a mere art to an applied science, it must constantly be fed by contributions from the laboratory.

The microscope, in its development, furnished more to medicine than any other single instrument. With it medicine unlocked the secrets of the cell, of generation, of heredity, of fundamental disease processes, and of the world of bacteria.

Almost hand in hand with the development of microscopy moved forward the science of chemistry. In making a diagnosis, the physician uses chemistry to examine the urine, the composition of the blood and stomach secretion. In curing the patient, chemistry is responsible for the form of most of the drugs you take, for the calculation of your diet, for the condition of the air in your room, for the disinfection of the articles you use.

These two methods have been, for many years, combined in medical practice in the form of the clinical laboratory, and it is encouraging to find from the report of Dr. Theodore Abel, of Chicago, that they are still making progress. Perhaps a review of these will give the reader some ideas of the daily work of the average doctor.

In the field of bacteriology he names, as of most help, first, the use of the Bordet-Gengou medium to diagnose whooping cough and to release cases from quarantine earlier. The medium is spread out like jelly on a flat plate and the patient coughs on it. The whooping cough germs grow on the medium in metallic looking colonies, making it appear as if a pinch of mercury had been sprayed on it. If no such colonies appear, the patient is no longer spreading the disease and can be released.

Along the same line, a quick method has been developed of culturing diphtheria bacilli so that growth occurs in eight hours. This allows of an earlier administration of antitoxin in doubtful cases.

A new food poisoning germ has been isolated.

One of the most astonishing tests of recent years is the Aschheim-Zondek method for the early determination of pregnancy. As soon as pregnancy begins the woman develops a changed secretion in her body which is cast out in great amounts in the urine. When some of this urine is injected into an undeveloped female animal it rapidly becomes mature. By a modification of this, called after Friedman, the test has been made more accurate, so that prediction of a blessed event can be made without benefit of Walter Winchell many months before that eminent detective finds out.

Another test which is more and more coming into prominence is the blood sedimentation test. In certain conditions the red blood corpuscles seem to be loaded with a heavier chemical content than normal. When mixed in a test tube of salt solution, they fall to the bottom much more rapidly than normal. This seems to occur in cases of cancer and tuberculosis, and while it is not absolutely final, it gives a valuable hint when the cancer is not on the surface of the body.

Such developments—and this is only a very partial list of them—will give the average man an idea of the immensely complex work which goes on in even the most average and commonplace medical practice.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instruction for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

'Expansive Living' Best Happiness Formula For Modern Woman, Says Tennessee Leader

Mrs. Elizabeth Coppedge Is Convincing Example of Own Theory.

By Malvina Lindsay.

ON MEETING Mrs. Elizabeth Davis Coppedge, one is immediately tempted to throw formality to the wind and inquire bluntly, "What is your secret of happiness?"

Such a radiantly joyous person is this youthful looking director for Tennessee of Women's and Professional Projects of the WPA that she seems an anomaly in a world of harried and frowning femininity.

"Oh well, she probably has nothing to worry about," a stranger taking the measure of the pretty, gay, typically Southern woman, might object. "Sheltered, protected, not a care in the world——"

But the judgment would be wrong. Mrs. Coppedge is one of the busiest women in Tennessee, if not the Nation. Moreover—though she does not speak of them—she has known her problems. One was stepping out from a sheltered Southern upbringing to become the economic head of the family when her husband, Dr. Thomas Coppedge, several years ago, suffered injuries in an automobile accident that left him an invalid. Now she not only carries the responsibility of a demanding job, but maintains an active home life, supervises the education of a 16-year-old son, and still finds time to give of herself blithely and generously to church, club, civic, political and social life.

Harris & Ewing.

Varied Activities.

To mention only a few of her activities—she is legislative chairman for the Tennessee Federation of Women's Clubs; vice chairman of the Democratic State Committee; member of the board and executive committee of the Red Cross; a worker in the Memphis Little Theater of which she was president from 1934-36; a lecturer on religious, educational and cultural topics, and—occupation that is closest of all to her heart—teacher of a Memphis Bible class of about 200 young men and women.

In addition she is writing a book, one that she hopes will offer a philosophy of life to the groping and confused present generation.

When she speaks of her book, one musters courage and asks, "Just what is your philosophy of life? Has it anything to do with . . . with your being so happy?"

She laughs. "Do I seem happy? I am so glad. Above all things in the world I want to radiate a happy quality of life. Frankly, I am happy."

"But how?"

She pauses, then says with great earnestness, "Basically I believe it goes back to seeking my strength from an inner source—call it old-fashioned religion if you will. However, that is not enough. Happiness will not come when we are passive about our faith. We must do something about it. W are told to go and do—yes and to share."

Biblical Injunction.

The old Scriptural doctrine of "good works!" Yet, as she explains it, one sees that it is also a formula of science—the expanding of one's personality in social interests—preached by no less a noted psychologist than Dr. Alfred Adler.

In Mrs. Coppedge one senses that it is this expansiveness of living that has given her much of her buoyant vitality, that it is an unselfish adjustment to life rather than a beauty shop that has given her the unlined brow and shining eyes that seem to belie she could possibly have had a coming-out party in 1915.

Previously, at her graduation from high school, she had done what she now terms "a very audacious thing"—presented a paper expounding the theories of happiness from the time of the ancient philosophers. She wound up with the conclusion that "the good of one is the good of all," and decided then that would be the philosophy she would attempt to live by.

Women can achieve happiness, yes even youth and beauty, she believes, by outpouring on society the energy, the devotion, the service that in an earlier civilization she lavished upon her more complex home life. Now that home with its manifold physical and spiritual demands has largely passed. But woman still retains her warmth of spirit, her capacity for devotion to others. Let her give these things out in all directions. Let her forget herself, cease to be introspective, or worry about oncoming wrinkles, past mistakes or future fears. Let her give of herself to the world as her grandmother did to the home.

"Not that I would have any woman neglect her home," explains Mrs. Coppedge. "The home comes first. But I think that the woman who has any leisure, or can find any leisure, owes it to society to reinvest her security. She is a debtor to the past. She should help others attain the security and opportunity she has known.

"The machine age has freed her from many material demands. She is under obligation to use her new leisure to improve human values which represent the new frontier of America."

"Voting is not enough. It is only the expression of the things a woman satnds for. She must do more. She faces the challenge of helping America build its new spiritual frontier.

"Let her do something about the slums in her community. Let her see that the children of her town have adequate recreation. Let her encourage the arts, help to gear educational opportunities to the changing times.

"Above all, let her learn to face the world with goodwill, feeling that it is a friendly world. Let her put fear out of her life. Let her lose herself in working for others and I believe she will achieve an oriented personality—happiness."

Enthusiastic about her activity with the Works Progress Administration is Mrs. Coppedge, because she feels that it fits in with her philosophy of life. She pays tribute to Mrs. Ellen Woodward, assistant administraotr in charge of women's projects, with whom she is here conferring for the vision shown in shaping a program to meet the needs of underprivileged women who are heads of families.

Many such women in Tennessee, according to Mrs. Coppedge, have found economic opportunity through a relation of handcraft and other arts to present day needs. Through this movement, Mrs. Coppedge believes, many persons will be helped to discover themselves, "find a service they can give to the world" and in turn receive the blessing of personal security and happiness.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 18.

THE LOCAL "sit-down" strike epidemic is reaching tremendous proportions, with everybody doing it for all conceivable reasons. I suppose it is so popular because the technique is so simple, merely involving sinking quietly to rest wherever one happens to be, which is certainly easier and less wearing than building and manning barricades, shouting and waving flags and plowshares in the face of the polizei.

ALICE HUGHES.

I happened to see one the other night, in the very hub and nubbin of roaring Times Square, and although it only took two people to make it, the affair caused almost as big a ruckus as though an army took part. What happened was merely this. Over 1,000 employes of a big chain of shoe stores were having their sumptuous annual banquet inside the noted and luxurious Hotel Astor, while outside several striking boys and girls of the company thought it a shame that the workers should be mauling the conventional rubber chicken and pressed-brick rolls while they were outside.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Tucker, therefore, made their sit-down more emphatic by chaining themselves to the hotel railing, thus sitting down immovably. Such antics in Times Square cause a traffic tie-up and a small riot in ten seconds, and no less than 25 of our strongest bluecoats were ultimately required to loose the bonds of the embattled Tuckers and get the sidewalks moving again. It was a small but very effective exposition of the new technique.

These be parlous times, indeed, and the sit-down business is the newest problem of our day. It spreads through publicity. I found my spouse sitting on the bed sulking last night, and he told me he was on a sit-down strike until the family dinners were served on time. Without calling in the Department of Labor, I merely rushed along the soup. But it's a symptom!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The story of Eileen Wenzel is a flashing bit of human interest here. Once she was one of the loveliest gals glorified by the great Ziegfeld—one of those tall, almost insultingly perfect things of feminine beauty that paraded his stages. Then a midnight auto crash, her face slashed and torn, and seemingly the end of all things for the professional beauty. There was a cash settlement, but her "career" was over. Then, only the other night, I see Eileen at a Broadway night club, looking very pretty, indeed—and on her ring finger an 8-carat flasher presented by a rich South American swain. So we never know—even in our blackest hours! . . . .

It is now certain that the theatrical hit of our season is the Kaufman-Hart nonsensity, "You Can't Take It With You," which has left all rivals far in the ruck. By this time, the Chicago company should be knocking over the good burghers of Illinois. Sharks say it will run forever here. Good gosh, what do those boys do with all their money . . .

Wipe with a wet cheesecloth 1½ pounds fillet of haddock, spread with prepared mustard, sprinkle with salt and pepper and place in casserole on thin slices of fat salt pork. Parboil together for ten minutes 4 good-sized potatoes, cut in ¾-inch cubes and 4 small onions, diced. Arrange onions and potatoes in center of fish, surround with 3 carrots shredded and parboiled, and cover with 1½ cups white sauce and 1-3 cup bread crumbs. Cut slices of salt pork in narrow strips, lay over the crumbs and bake for 30 minutes at 350 F.

Children Soon Acquire Urge For Collecting

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MOST CHILDEN begin at a very early age to like many objects of the same kind. If they gather shells on the beach, they gather not one or two, but dozens; if they see a row of uniform articles, one will not content them, they must have them all. The collector's urge begins early.

The mother who realizes this characteristic trait of childhood can capitalize on it in many ways. A box of spools will amuse a child for some time. When he is very tiny he will probably only pitch them about, but by the time he is 3 or 4 he will set them in rows, sort them by size or color, experiment with them in a dozen different ways.

When he is old enough to have learned not to put things into his mouth, buttons—many buttons— are a source of constant joy. Every home should have a button box and in this day of button triming a button box is not hard to fill. There should be sets of buttons in the collection, and great variety of shape, size and color. The child will soon begin to sort them into groups. After that he can make patterns, plan flower gardens, or string the various kinds together.

While the child is apparently merely amusing himself, he is unconsciously learning something every minute. His sense of touch is developing, he is learning to distinguish between objects which are similar and yet not identical. He is very probably developing a sense of form and color. Presently he will become conscious of number, and with a very little help will be able to count his treasures.

The best way to train a child is to watch his normal growth and give him a chance to use the tendencies with which nature endowed him. A mother does not need any educational paraphernalia, but she does need to use her imagination.

Lenten Meals Can Be 'Saved' With Macaroni

Post Weekly Prize Contest Draws Many Unusual Seasonal Recipes.

By Rebekah Blake.

LENTEN MEALS will not be monotonous if the recipes in The Post Macaroni Recipe Contest are anything to judge by. There were many recipes for macaroni and meat dishes, macaroni and vegetable dishes, macaroni and cheese suggestions and macaroni desserts submitted. Very few duplicate recipes were received.

The first prize, $3, was won by Miss Ruth Whissen, of Bentonville, Va., for her recipe of deviled macaroni and frankfurter ring.

Mrs. Edna Ambrose, Harpers Ferry, W. Va., won the second prize, $2, for her recipe for Macaroni Souffle; Mrs. Lillian Boswell, of Waldorf, Md., received the third prize, $1, for her interesting recipe for Macaroni Medley, and Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, 46 Rhode Island avenue northwest, was awarded the fourth prize, also $1, for her recipe for Crab Montebello. The fifth prize, $1, went to Mrs. Sarah Bright, 705 Sixth street northwest, for her recipe for Macaroni and Apple Pudding.

Deviled Macaroni and Frankfurter Ring.

Cook 1 and 1-3 cups macaroni for 15 minutes. Drain and rinse with cold water. Put in saucepan 1½ cups cooked tomatoes, 1 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon grated onion. Mix together until smooth ¼ cup flour and ¼ cup water. Stir into tomato mixture. Boil 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Add macaroni and 1 cup grated cheese and cook slowly until cheese is melted, then stir mixture into 2-3 cup of hot evaporated milk. Serve at once in center of frankfurter ring.

Frankfurter Ring.

Light oven and set to hot. Stand upright 12 frankfurters, using 2 toothpicks for each, arrange in a ring. Wrap 4 slices of bacon around outside. Rub frankfurters with melted fat. Put in shallow baking pan, bake 15 minutes.

Mrs. Ambrose's recipe:

Macaroni Souffle.

4 medium size potatoes, sliced ½ inch thick
1 medium size onion, thinly sliced.

Cook the macaroni, potatoes and onion separately in salt water until tender, drain well, put in baking dish, using macaroni first, then sliced potatoes and onion. Pour over it 1 small bottle of tomato catsup, ½ pound grated or finely chopped cheese on top. Dilute 1 large can of evaporated milk by adding ¼ pint of water, put milk on stove and add ¼ pound butter to milk and heat until butter is melted. Pour over contents in dish and bake in moderate oven 45 minutes or until chese is slightly brown, or longer if preferred very brown. Season with salt and pepper. If oleomargarine is used as butter substitute, do not use as much salt. The onion may be omitted. Any kind of macaroni may be used, but elbow is preferred.

Mrs. Boswell's recipe:

Macaroni Medley.

1 onion
1 green pepper
4 tablespoons fat
1 pound hamburger
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2-3 cup tomato soup
½ cup water
2 cups cooked macaroni
½ cup grated cheese
1 cup cauliflower

Chop the onion and pepper. Fry in cooking fat until golden brown. Add meat and seasonings. Stir and fry for 5 minutes. Mix soup and water. Add to meat mixture. Stir well. Put half of macaroni in baking dish. Sprinkle with cheese. Add layer of meat. Make layer of macaroni, cheese and meat again, saving out some cheese for the top. Arrange cauliflower flowerets over top. Sprinkle with cheese. Cover dish. Cook in moderately hot oven (375 F.) for 25 minutes. Remove cover. Bake 10 minutes longer until nicely browned.

Mrs. Edwards' recipe:

Crab Montebello.

½ pound grated cheese
Cracker crumbs
1 small can tomato sauce
1 large can crab meat
1 can button mushrooms cut in half
3 tablespoons flour
1 medium sized onion
1 green pepper
2 tablespoons fat
1 large can evaporated milk

Cook macaroni until tender; drain. Put macaroni and cheese in top of double boiler. Stir constantly until cheese melts. Pour into a greased flat pan; press down. Chill until firm. Cut in squares, dip in cracker crumbs; fry in deep fat at 375 F. until brown. Drain, chop onion and green pepper fine; fry in the 2 tablespoons fat until brown. Add mushrooms; heat thoroughly. Stir in flour and blend. Add remaining ingredients. Cook until thick. Serve on the macaroni squares.

Here is Mrs. Bright's recipe:

Macaroni and Apple Pudding.

1 pound of apples
4 ounces pipe macaroni
2 ounces sugar
2 ounces white bread crumbs
1 tablespoon cream
Rind of one-half lemon
1 ounce butter

Cook the macaroni in boiling water for three-quarters of an hour, or until it is tender, but not broken; drain it well. Butter a pie dish or a pudding basin, and line with the macaroni. Now sprinkle it with bread crumbs. Pare and cut up the apples very fine; mix with the grated lemon peel, cream and sugar. Fill the basin with this mixture and sprinkle a few bread crumbs on top. Cut up the butter and put small pieces on the bread crumbs. Now add a layer of macaroni; trim it round; cover with a plate and bake one hour. Turn out and serve with a white sauce.

South American Colors Are Vogue

Stripes and Taffeta Plaids Also to Have Inning.

New York (AP).—Women are going South American in the colors and designs of their clothing—for the next few months at least.

Edith Marie Reuss, pretty young fabric designer who figured it out many weeks ago, attributes the trend partly to interests stimulated by President Roosevelt's recent visit to several South American countries.

"Generally it isn't so hard to figure patterns women will wear six to eight months ahead," she said, "women mostly like clothing suggestive of what they are thinking about."

The South American influence is appearing only in the smartest shops now, she explained, but it probably will become the strongest American style in years.

Chinese and Dutch East Indian colors will be minor trends. Stripes and taffeta plaids will have their inning, she said.

"We're coming out of a period in which brilliant colors of tyrolean origin have been dominant," Miss Reuss said. "The natural turn would have been to Spain, but the war there became a cruel page in history. You can't change from flashy colors to pastel shades overnight. Therefore the turn for ideas was to South America whose softer brick and clay hues, for example, will replace the brilliant reds.

Indian Woman, 92, Holds Forest Job

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Mrs. Charles Baker, 92, a wrinkled, white-haired full-blooded Chippewa Indian, is employed by the U. S. Forest Service. She still is an expert in her native crafts.

She has retired to a shack deep in the woods where she lives with her son, Frank. Until spring the cottage will be snowbound. She and Frank will live on what food he can get in the woods—rabbits, deer and moose. Frank will reach the outside world occasionally by dogsled. Mrs. Baker will remain at home.

This fall Mrs. Baker gathered large quantities of wild rice from Four Mile Lake to add to the winter's food supply.

U.S. Consultant, Landscape Architect, Succumbs at Mass Home.

Dr. John Nolen, 68, the world-famous landscape architect, who replanned and made more beautiful 50 American cities, died yesterday at his home in Garden Terrace, near Cambridge, Mass., after an illness of several months.

He was the father of John Nolen, jr., director of planning of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

A native of Philadelphia, Dr. Nolen was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and received his master degree from Harvard. He was engaged on more than 400 public planning projects. These included 50 cities in 20 different States and as many towns and suburbs.

Dr. Nolen, much of whose life was spent in obliterating the uglier phases of the crowded industrial age, had been a consultant of the Department of the Interior since 1933. In this capacity he had assignments in the National Park Service, the housing division of the PWA and the Resettlement Administration.

Pioneer in Planning.

He was recognized in the United States and abroad as a pioneer in the modern development of city and regional planning. He also was distinguished as the author of numerous books, reports and a host of pamphlets, both technical and popular, on planning civic subjects, and as a lecturer in planning education and public relations.

The marked success of his life work was his constant readiness to adopt and apply new ideas to modern life and swiftly changing conditions.

Included in the 50 cities Dr. Nolen replanned were Roanoke, Va.; San Diego and Sacramento, Calif.; Montclair and Glen Ridge, N. J.; Madison and La Crosse, Wis.; Schenectady and Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Akron, Ohio; Flint, Mich.; Elkhart, Ind.; Sarasota, and St. Petersburg, Fla.; Asheville, N. C., and Johnson City, Tenn.; Dubuque, Iowa, and various other types and sizes.

He supervised the building of parks and industrial areas, where factory chimneys not far away belched smoke. He planned residential districts and resorts.

Planned New Towns.

Among his general plans for new towns were those from which grew Kingsport, Tenn.; Venice and Clewiston, Fla.; Marlemont, Ohio, a model village and a Cincinnati suburb; Union Park Gardens, at Wilmington, Del., and Wyomissing, Pa.

Dr. Nolen made regional plans or served in collaborative consultation for 16 regions and metropolitan districts in the United States, including Philadelphia and New York.

He was past president of the National Conference on City Planning and the American City Planning Institute. He was a member of the board of directors of the American Society of Planning Officials and the American Planning and Civic Association.

Between 1895 and 1935 Dr. Nolen made 14 trips to Europe, studying planning and architecture in 18 countries. He was adjudicator of competitive designs for the city planning of Dublin, and a past president and member of the executive council of the International Federation for Housing and Town Planning in London. He presided over the International Housing and Town Planning Congress in London in 1935.

Honored in Germany.

Previous to this he had attended the congresses in Gothenburg, Vienna, Paris and Berlin, and in 1931 he received an award from the Oberlander Trust for the study of city planning in Germany. He was an honorary member of the Town Planning Institute of London.

Dr. Nolen was a member of the Harvard Club, of New York; the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity; the Cosmos Club; the Puddingstone Club, of Boston; the Boston Authors' Club; the Appalachian Mountain Club, the Harvard Faculty Club and the London Authors' Club.

Surviving are his wife, Barbara Schatte Nolan; three sons, John Nolen, jr., of Washington, Edward Nolan, of New York, and Humphrey Nolen, of Canton, Mass.; a daughter, Mrs. David Fales Strong, of New York, and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass.

Restaurant Racket Expose Completed

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—The prosecution in the New York restaurant racket trial completed today its story of a lawless combine of sinister might that squeezed $2,000,000 a year from fear-ridden restaurant men.

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 (AP).—Leaving a note describing his sensations as he awaited death, Homer S. McFarland, 27, film cartoonist on Walt Disney's staff, was found dead today—successful in his third suicide attempt, police Capt. Bert Massey said.

Exhaust fumes had been piped with garden hose into McFarland's closed automobile, in which the body was found.

Massey said the cartoonist "promised me yesterday he wouldn't try suicide again" after a two-hour talk following frustration in two attempts on his life. "I thought I had him talked out of it."

Forum Lecture Tonight.

Jose Dercero, of the Pan American Union, and Gardner Jackson, chairman of the Committee on Rural Social Planning, will address the Capital City Forum tonight at 8:15 on "Mexico's Agrarian Program." Senor Dercero, an authority on agrarian problems, will discuss the applicability of the Mexican program to the sharecropper problem in the United States.

News Safeguard Asked.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 18 (AP).—Senator Fred Risser, Progressive, asked the Legislature today to enact a law forbidding authorities to compel newspapermen to tell the sources of their news.

DR. JOHN NOLEN.

Bethesda Resident, Native of Florida, Was Alumnus of Vanderbilt.

William Warfield Ross, well-known Washington attorney, whose home was in Grosvenor lane, Bethesda, Md., died at Emergency Hospital yesterday morning following a cerebral hemorrhage. He was stricken Saturday while attending the annual meeting of the University Club.

Mr. Ross was born January 28, 1887, in Eustic Fla., the son of William Bennett Ross and Hattie Warfield Ross, of Nashville, Tenn. He was educated in the public schools of Nashville and at Vanderbilt University. He received his law degree from George Washington University in 1917.

In 1917-18 Mr. Ross was connected with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Afterward he was associated in the practice of law with Arthur Peter and later with the law firm of Good, Saunders, Childs, Bobb and Wescott, of Washington and Chicago. For the last seven years he had been a member of the law firm of Doyle and Ross.

He was a member of Sigma Chi and Phi Delta Phi fraternities. As a member of the University Club he engaged in the negotiations that resulted in the merger of that club with the Racquet Club. For several years he was president of the Washington Chapter of the Vanderbilt University Alumni Club. He also was a member of the District of Columbia Bar Association and the American Bar Association. He had been a member of the faculty of the George Washington University Law School for the last year.

Mr. Ross is survived by his wife, Elfreda Payne Ross, and two children, William Warfield, jr., and James Samuel. He also is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Grace Ross Osborne, of Hartford, Conn., and Miss Christine Ross, of Monteagle, Tenn.

Funeral services will be held at Hysong's funeral chapel at 11 a. m. Saturday and will be private.

Colored Policeman Killed by Own Gun

Policeman Monroe Clapp, colored, 31, attached to the Second Precinct, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday a few hours after he was found shot in a washroom at 1244 Fifth street northeast.

Zaharoff Paris Estate 'Less Than a Million'

Paris, Feb. 18 (AP).—The estate in France of Sir Basil Zaharoff, Europe's "mystery armaments salesman" who died last November, is "about the same as the estate in England," Countess D'Ostrorog, one of two stepdaughters and co-heiresses to his fortune was quoted by French newspapers as saying today.

(British officials announced in London yesterday Sir Basil's estate, in England, was valued at approximately $965,000.)

"All the fantastic sums mentioned—running close to $50,000,000—are not correct," the countess was declared to have said. "I wish they were because I would not mind inheriting a bigger sum."

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1937

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Attention: A. F. G. E.

Nursing its wounds from two encounters recently with the National Executive Council, A. F. G. E., the Reaffiliation Committee for the five ousted lodges looks up and directs certain blasts at the council, which are quoted, as follows:

"The committee * * * consider the so-called hearing given it on Sunday, February 14, by the Executive Council, A. F. G. E., undemocratic and un-American. The council refused a statement of the grounds upon which the lodges were ousted from the A. F. G. E. or upon which the petition for charters was denied. There was no discussion of the unions involved. * * *

"Instead, the council members launched unjustified vicious personal attacks against individual members of the delegation. The Executive Council's decision was therefore reached upon the basis of prejudgments due to personal antagonisms and not upon rational deliberation upon the actions and the membership of the unions. * * *

"In acting as judge, prosecutor and jury, and at the same time withholding the charges from the defendants, the Executive Council was guilty of Hitlerism. The five unions will continue to protect the interests of their members and of the employes of their agencies. They will bitterly oppose any attempts of the A. F. G. E. to set up dual unions which would split and weaken the efforts of government employes in those agencies to improve their working conditions. * * *

"The shame of this act of dismemberment rests upon the Executive Council of the A. F. G. E. and for it they must answer to their membership. Since the Executive Council has refused to recognize the need for unity in furthering legislation beneficial to government employes, the five unions will take action as a group to protect their legislative interests. Efforts of the unions to co-operate with the American labor movement and to affiliate with it will be continued and strengthened."

Whenever someone is on the job it's a matter worthy of the record. The Agriculture Department first made note of the fact in announcing the dates for issuance of cotton grade and staple reports covering the 1937-38 crop. "The reports will be issued about a week earlier this year than heretofore, through the co-operation of cotton growers and ginners in promptly shipping to the Bureau samples of cotton ginned."

Rating Plans For Teachers Cause Dispute

Revised Sheets Called 'Impractical' by Principals.

The 2-year-old controversy over the method of rating Washington public school teachers flared at a Board of Education meeting yesterday as school trustees sought to put a proposed new system into trial use.

A report from Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, that several of the school principals and supervising principals were opposed to the new "rating sheet" and also to experimental use of it at this time, drew fire from several of the board members. They voted later, however, to adopt a compromise plan offered by Dr. Ballou.

"Remember we want a rating sheet that will be satisfactory to the teachers—not to the supervising principals," declared Henry Gilligan, vice president of the board.

Satisfaction to Both Urged.

"It must be satisfactory to both," replied Dr. Ballou.

"But it was the teachers who complained about the present system, and brought about the proposed revisions," said Gilligan. "It must be made clear that we have a definite plan before us—not something to be discarded if the rating officers don't like it."

The rating sheet is the paper form used by principals and supervising principals in determining the professional standings of all teachers in the school system. While ratings do not have a direct relation to salary schedules, they do have a bearing on promotions and professional advancement.

Two years ago several teachers' groups complained about the lack of uniformity through the school system in the application of the present rating forms. As a result the board authorized the appointment of a teachers committee to draw up a revised form. This committee reported several months ago, and its proposals were submitted to the board, and later to the principals and all rating officers for approval.

Ballou Plan Approved.

Yesterday, Dr. Ballou read to the board the reactions of the teachers' proposed form that he received from the rating officers.

Dr. Ballou, "in view of so much opposition to the new plan of teacher rating proposed," offered this plan—which the board approved:

1. That the present teacher rating sheet be used for the current school year as was done last year. The official rating for this school year would therefore be made on this rating sheet.

2. That in addition to the official teacher rating, each rating officer be requested to make a trial use of the new rating sheet by rating not fewer than five teachers or more than ten, and file such ratings with the superintendent along with a "written report covering the rating officers' experience, observations, criticisms, and recommendations regarding the trial use of the new rating sheet."

3. That official use of the supervisory form be postponed until each group of rating officers shall have studied it and reached conclusions as to its usability for each school level.

When urged by Dr. Hayden Johnson, board member, to "use pressure" on rating officers to get them to experiment with the new form, Dr. Ballou said any experiment would be futile if th principals did not have sufficient time to "become familiar with it."

In voting against trial use of the new form in their report to Dr. Ballou the supervising principals said, "It seems impracticable even as an experiment at this time of the school year."

Dr. Ballou explained that the job of rating teachers requires close observation of her work, and that principals and other officers must "thoroughly understand" the system of rating if they are to achieve the desired uniform results.

Here's $1,785.05 In Lonely Money Seeking a Home

Another chapter in the tale of a horse was written into local court records yesterday when two prominent women spurned $1,785.05 which has been laying around begging for claimants for weeks.

The money is the residue after a board bill for the horse was paid the Railway Express Agency from proceeds of an auction. The horse is the historic animal, Cypress dau Beau, whose chief distinction was that nobody would claim him despite an estimated value of $4,000.

Cypress arrived here from Canada consigned to Mrs. John Hay Whitney, wealthy sportswoman residing in Warrenton, Va. He was shipped to her by Mrs. L. L. Bredin, of Montreal.

The bidding exceeded all expectations of the express company. They got their $440 for board and freight, and had $1,785 left over. They wrote to Mrs. Whitney and Mrs. Bredin asking each to come forward and claim the money. Neither did. Yesterday the money was turned over to the registry of courts, where it will repose until somebody presents a satisfactory claim.

D. A. R. to Battle Change in Court

The District of Columbia Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday arrayed itself against President Roosevelt's bill to enlarge the Supreme Court by indorsing the stand taken Wednesday by Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, chairman of the patriotic education committee of the D. A. R.

Mrs. Sisson's committee pointed to the "potential danger" in enlarging the court to a possible 15 members.

Execution of Cashier's Slayer Delayed Month

Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Court, yesterday postponed for one month the execution of Thomas Jordan, 33-year-old bus-boy slayer of Mrs. Lizzie T. Jaynes, former cashier of the Garden-T-Shoppe, to enable the Department of Justice to pass on an appeal for clemency now pending there.

District D. A. R. Group Lunches At Historic Inn

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, state historian of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution, presided over the annual gathering of the historians from the 59 chapters in the District yesterday in historic Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria.

The meeting always is held on the third Thursday in February near Washington's Birthday. Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, through Comdr. John A. Nugent, and the chairman of the house committee, Jones Cox, extended the invitation for the use of the tavern, so closely identified with Gen. Washington, for the meetings.

The meeting opened with a luncheon for 90, served by members of the American Legion Auxiliary under the direction of Mrs. Herbert A. Cady, president, and Mrs. W. Milton Glasgow, and was presided over by Mrs. Pennington, assisted by Mrs. E. J. Ryan.

The program included talks by Mrs. Charles C. Haig, State regent of the District of Columbia; Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair, of Alexandria, national president of the Children of the American Revolution; Mrs. Robert Miller Reese, of the board of governors of Gadsby's Tavern, who spoke on its restoration and history connected with George Washington; Mrs. Donald Earll, vice chairman of the District historical committee, who talked on Washington in connection with the District of Columbia; Charles Wall, assistant superintendent at Mount Vernon, who talked of Washington and Mount Vernon.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

The other day a fella sent me a paper that was published 25 years ago. Now I want to tel you I got quite a kick out of it. I got to lookin' at the advertisements and I compared 'em with the ads that are runnin' in the same paper today. It just shows how men keep abreast of the times. The men who advertised in the old paper 25 years ago, sellin' buggies, are sellin' automobiles today.

The man who ran the Harness Shop in the old days is now manufacturin' suit cases and golf bags. It kinda reminded me of the blacksmith down home. I used to worry about him because the blacksmith business kept fallin' off every year and I wondered what he was gonna do, but I found out that he's kept abreast of the times, too.

Not long ago, he attended a home talent show given for the church down home and when the chorus came out and sang a song about the village blacksmith, they got so much applause that this blacksmith knew they was gonna sing an encore, so he rushed back-stage and whispered to the song leader, "When you sing that second chorus, will you put in a word about me mendin' bicycles, too?"

School Unit May Lift Ban On Magazine

Gilligan Will Seek New Hearing in Favor of 'Scholastic.'

The school magazine, Scholastic, banned for its "pacifism" by the board of education several weeks ago, is going to get a new hearing—probably at the board's next meeting.

This was practically assured yesterday when at a meeting of the school trustees Board Member Henry Gilligan, who was one to vote for the ban, said he wanted the case reopened. He served warning that "unless someone else does it" he would move at the next session of the board to have the case reconsidered.

"I have been reading current issues of the magazine," he explained, "and am not at all sure it should be banned permanently."

The school board barred the magazine for a "pacifistic" policy expressed in editorials urging that in the event of war private capital as well as man power should be drafted for the conflict.

Gilligan in this statement concurred in the opinion expressed by Mrs. Lenore Smith, another member, who two weeks ago informed her colleagues that she planned to bring the Scholastic case up for reconsideration "sometime in the future." Yesterday Mrs. Smith was absent because of illness. Three other members were also absent and Gilligan said he would not move for reconsideration until there were "more members present."

Actions taken by the board yesterday included:

Abandonment of the three-room Reservoir School in the Foxhall Village area, and the transfer of its 80 pupils to the Hardy and Key schools was approved.

Announcement that the high school competitive drills will take place in Griffith Stadium beginning May 6. Divisions 10 to 13 will drill on May 6 (May 7 in the event of rain) and Divisions 1 to 9 on May 10 and 11 (May 12 being reserved if there is rain on the earlier days).

Dr. Ballou reported more than the usual number of teachers and officers are out because of sickness. Dr. Chester W. Holmes and Miss Jessie LaSalle, both assistant superintendents, are convalescing from illnesses that have kept them from their offices for several weeks.

Post Bazooka Contest Is Set For March 6 at D. C. Theater

Prizes in Cash and Merchandise to Be Awarded for Soloists, Duets, Trios, Quartets, Bands and Orchestras or What Have You.

Here's the news you've been waiting for, boys and girls! Details of the big Bob Burns-Washington Post Bazooka Contest. And unless we miss our guess, every one of you will be plenty busy the next three weeks getting ready for the best time you've had in years.

The big contest will be held March 6 (that's a Saturday) at 8:30 a. m., in one of the downtown motion picture theaters. The name of the theater will be announced in a few days.

Prizes will be in cash and merchandise. The first five prizes will be in cash and go to the best bazooka players ranging from soloists to whole bazooka bands.

Other winners will have a wide choice of grand things to select from.

How to Enter.

First, of course, you get a Bob Burns bazooka. Some store in your neighboorhood will have them in stock. They are the exact shape as the bazooka Bob Burns plays in the movies and in Bing Crosby's radio program. Just a little smaller. They work the same easy way.

Then begin a bazooka playing technique. You may be a "straight" bazooka player—or you may be better at novelty or comedy effects. But first, you'll want to work out some good tunes as solos. You'll find playing the bazooka is just as easy as whistling.

After you've got the swing of bazooka playing, look around at school, or in your Scout Troop at Sunday School, and find another boy or girl who is a good bazooka artist and form a partnership.

A $25 Prize.

You see there will be prizes for bazooka solos, duets, trios, quartets and bands, or orchestras.

The best bazooka band will receive a cash prize of $25. The best quartet, trio and duet will each get $10 cash as first prizes. And the best soloist gets a prize of $5. Each band must have eight or more bazooka players.

After the cash prizes have been awarded, the runners-up will have a choice of all sorts of things—Dizzy Dean baseball gloves, bats, balls, rain caps, pen and pencil sets, school sets, Melton jackets, Falcon cameras, pen lights, flash lights, swimming trunks, fishing outfits, harmonicas and so on.

Try Novel Sounds.

Get to work today and remember the date: March 6, Saturday morning, at 8:30, at a downtown theater to be announced later.

The chief thing now is to get to work on some novel and trick bazooka playing styles and practice for the big contest.

Keep in touch with the stories in The Post for more news and information. If you have any questions, just write to the Bazooka Contest, Washington Post.

Senate Group Planning Study Of D.C. Academy Appointments

A sub-committee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday promised to investigate a complaint that the District of Columbia has been discriminated against in the matter of appointments to West Point and Annapolis.

Spokesmen for several civic organizations told the sub-committee that at least eight States with smaller populations than the District are allowed more appointees each year.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman, said he will bring the complaint to the full Military Affairs Committee.

States, witnesses said, are allowed from 21 to 28 appointments, whereas the District gets only nine.

The Forest Hills Citizens Association, through its president, L. A. Carruthers, and Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, secretary, headed the list of local witnesses. Others included:

F. Hunter Creech and Paul Williams, Woodrow Wilson Home and School Association; Dr. E. S. Newton, principal of Western High School; Mrs. Robert Randall, Phoebe Hearst Parent-Teacher Association; W. J. Calnan, Alice Deal Home and School Association; Col. Wallace M. Craige, cadet instructor for local high schools; Mrs. Ward Griffith, jr., and E. C. Potter.

Short Work Week Opens Here Sunday

3,500 D. C. Per Diem Workers to Go on 40-Hour Basis.

Approximately 3,500 District per diem employes—laborers, mechanics, drivers, etc.—will begin work on a 40-hour-week basis next Sunday, the Commissioners announced yesterday.

It was estimated that the new working schedule will cost the District an additoinal $250,000 a year. Officials feared that services would have to be curtailed unless a supplemental appropriation is granted by Congress.

During summer months, when frequent garbage and refuse collections are necessary, the per diem rolls are increased to approximately 6,000 workers, it was pointed out. At present the District has not sufficient funds with which to pay per diem workers and at the same time uphold earlier standards of service to residents.

When the Comptroller General's ruling was first announced in December, District heads were in doubt as to which employes it should apply. Workers in the Sewer, Refuse, Water and Highway departments came specifically within its provisions, but officials were uncertain as to the others.

District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan contended that all per diem employes would come under the ruling. After careful study, his contentions were adopted by the Commissioners and the 40-hour-week basis was announced.

Colored Youth Leaves Academy

Annapolis, Feb. 18 (AP).—Naval Academy authorities said tonight all 135 Midshipmen who resigned this week because of failure in academic or physical tests left the academy today.

Included was James Johnson, 19, Washington colored youth. He was the first colored midshipman for many years.

Representative Mitchell, who appointed Johnson, had protested his dismissal and had asked President Roosevelt for an investigation.

BATTLE OF LANGUAGES. United States Attorney Garnett used a Latin phrase in a communication addressed to Attorney General Cummings about a week ago. Since then they have exchanged letters written in foreign languages, but the one reproduced above caused Mr. Garnett to give up.

'Crowd of Fun' Is New Byword At Shoreham

By Chanticleer.

"Crowd of fun" is the byword at the Shoreham these winter days. It's a sort of all in all—or one and one—proposition. Meaning that the Shoreham has two bright-light spots—the ballroom and the cocktail lounge each with its own brand of entertainent. For a complete evening's entertainment we could mention:

Cocktail Lounge—Open from 1 in the afternoon to 2 a. m., with the fun reaching its height about 1 with the Curfew Crew in charge. Al Kamons and Jimmy Shimer are the ringleaders in the One-to-Two Club nonsensities.

The de Mayos' whirlwind pace is proved in their dance numbers on the ballroom floor. Ripley termed them the fastest whirlwind dancers in the business. Barnee leads the band for your dancing.

Jack Tarr, vocalist with Sande Williams at the Carlton, has added two accomplishments to his numerous talents. He plays a slide whistle now—so effectively that the birds will be late returning from the South. And he barks so well that Judith Anderson, of the "Hamlet" cast a week or so ago, had difficulty in controlling her pet dogs out in the lobby. These talents make the number, "The Farmer and His Dog" something of a wow.

Bernie Allen, pianist with Arthur Warren's ork at the Wardman Park, is responsible for the unique arrangements of international dance numbers being played nightly in the Metronome Room. Allen studied four years in Leipzig. Tea dancing is on the Metronome Room's schedule tomorrow from 4:30.

presenting their own "swing moderne" dances this week at the Raleigh's Pall Mall room. Constituting that something different we all enjoy so much. Tony has starred as a dramtic actor, appeared with Miriam Hopkins and Ann Harding—but thinks dancing is a better vehicle of self-expression. Miss Halliday formerly was a solo dancer.

Some one with a statistical type of mind has reported that half barrel of beer, such as many bars use for draught beer, contains 200 glasses. From that starting point the figure of 7,000 glasses of beer was arrived at as the weekly consumption at Brinkley's, the popular South-east gathering point. Tsk! Tsk! What will be like in the summer?

"Streamlined Scandals," opening this week at Cocoanut Grove, features the popular ditty, "Gee, But You're Swell." It's done by Ray Beck with the chorus of eight lovely maidens as a background in a Flirtation Walk number. Lester and Daniels follow with a modernistic tango—very smooth. Another piece of nice work is the Native Dance, of the Cuban Maracas, also by Lester and Daniels. Frank McCormick is emmcee.

Stone Villa Inn, under new management, is becoming a favorite for Washingtonians who enjoy a swell steak or chicken dinner. Charlie Jewell and his orchestra play nightly for dancing. . . . Diane and Evans, the strolling entertainers at the Mayfair, are clicking with the patrons. Evans is a Chicagoan and worked fo ra long time with Maurie Sherman and his orchestra. His guitar playing is wicked. . . . Sunday Night Club at the Dude Ranch is proving quite popular. Another one of those gatherings which attracts the radio and stage folks on their night off. Admittance by card only. Berk Motley and his ork for dancing—but the piece de resistance is the spontaneous entertainment that breaks out here and there.

Costuming is coming in for a fair share of the compliments being left behind by the customers at the Lotus this week—as respects the Paul Florenz floor show, of course. Not only are the ladies of the Florenz ensemble bedecked most modernistically but they apparently have been fashioned to bring out the best features of the particular little ladies who are to wear them.

They're Both Lola Lolik

Lola Lolik, of the Russian Troika's dance team of Orlik and Lolik, is found by the photographer between numbers seated before the dressing room mirror. So he came back with two Lolas in one picture. Miss Lolik also is cast in the Troika's sketches.

Harrison Appointed.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 18.—James G. Harrison has been named national councilor of the chamber of commerce and in that capacity will represent the local organization at the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce to be held in Washington April 26 to 29.

On The Air Today

The principles of radio, usually referred to as the public address system or under a variety of other names as uses suggest, have proved a blessing in many ways. Factories uses microphones, wires and horns for summoning executives back to their offices; banquets are never complete these days without the inevitable microphone and loudspeakers; prize fights, baseball games and conventions are literally "wired for sound" in order that every one present may know what is taking place.

This usefulness of microphone, amplifier and loud speaker, however, is performing an unusual utility for the Washington Civic Theater. The group's present production, "Front Page," required a complicated series of offstage noises. These sound effects are accomplished by means of radio equipment very similarly to the production within the broadcasting studio.

However, the Civic Theater's smart young technicians carried the use of radio another stage. A microphone has been set up at the curtain line, just off stage. The other end is a speaker on the big table downstairs in the Green Room, where props and actors alike are assembled.

In this way the stage manager can ask for forgotton props or hurry a tardy actor without having to take a step away fom the action on the stage before him. The arrangement also permits the stage manager to direct all scene shifting and movement of props form a central point without having to employ numerous arms and legs as assistants.

Vic Arden, maestro of the "Broadway Varieties" noted in an obscure news item that Queen Elizabeth's favorite popular ditty is the perennially favorite, "St. Louis Blues." Tonight (WJSV, at 8) Arden and the orchestra will dedicate their special arrangement of the W. C. Handy tune to Her Royal Highness.

Handy himself says the number once before won the favor of the Windsor family—when the then Prince of Wales with nine other bagpipers played their own arrangement of it. Another of Handy's songs that caught the fancy of royalty is his "Memphis Blues." Duke Alexis of Russia spent many a long hour learning it from a traveling musician visiting the court at St. Petersburg.

Other features today:

Braddock-Louis—Fighters will be heard from WMAL, at 1:30 when they sign contracts in Chicago.

Radio Guild—Presents two one-act plays—"The Queen's Enemies" and "Lend Me Five Shillings," adapted to radio by James Church, WMAL, at 4.

"Alice In Wonderland"—New record for size of cast is set by the "Singing Lady" in half-hour version of Carroll's story, WMAL, at 5:15.

Prominent Educators—Will be heard from New Orleans (NEA convention) in "Education in the News," WRC, at 6.

Mary Eastman—Replaces Bernice Claire, beginning tonight, in "Waltz Time," WRC, at 9. Miss Claire begins a personal appearance tour.

Victor Moore—And Helen Broderick give farewell in "Twin Stars" to Buddy Rogers, who leaves for England, WMAL, at 9:30.

Senator Wheeler—Will oppose the proposed judiciary reform, WMAL, at 10. Representative U. S. Guyer, of Kansas, speaks from WJSV, on "Why Pack the Supreme Court?"

• • • •

Here and there: Hal Kemp and orchestra made a smash hit with their arrangement of Ravel's "Bolero" several weeks ago and tonight (WJSV, at 8:30) Kemp does another bolero type arrangement using "Under the Spell of the a Voodoo Drum" as his theme . . . Homer Croy or Dale Carnegie will probably take over "We, the People" when Phil Lord takes a much needed vacation soon. J. H. H.

Marine Corps Orders Clarke To San Digeo

Col. Vandegrift Ordered to Report Here From Peiping Service.

Col. Thomas S. Clarke, commanding officer of the Marine Barracks here, has been ordered to San Diego, Calif., according to yesterday's Marine Corps orders. Also affected by the orders was Col. Alexander A. Vandegrift, who will report to Marine Headquarters here in June, following service at the American Embassy in Peiping, China.

Col. Clark has been stationed here since 1934, following a tour of duty in Haiti, where he was made a brigadier general in the Garde de Haiti. Joining the Marine Corps in 1909, he has been on duty at Panama, San Diego, Annapolis, at headquarters here, and on the U. S. S. Rochester, Nashville and Tennessee. He will command a regiment in the Fleet Marine Force at the base in San Diego.

Appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps in 1909, Col. Vandegrift has been in command of the American Embassy guard at Peiping since 1935. Previous to that assignment he spent five years at headquarters here in the office of the co-ordinator in the Navy Department. Other assignments have included duty in Panama, Vera Cruz, Haiti, Quantico and on board the U. S. S. Minnesota, Virginia and Chester. He is a graduate of the Marine Corps School in Quantico.

Maj. William C. Hall also was ordered to duty here from the embassy in Peiping, to report in early summer. A native of Washington, Maj. Hall was stationed at the Marine Barracks here from 1924 to 1927, and again from 1930 to 1933. Other assignments have included duty in Nicaragua, Haiti and on board the U. S. S. New York.

Perjury Charged To Bride's Mother

Seattle, Feb. 18 (AP).—Police investigation of the marriages of two grammar school girls brought perjury charges tonight against the mother of one, Delta Palmer, who married a 38-year-old colored garbage dump worker.

Deputy Prosecutor Grant C. Calhoun filed the perjury charge against Mrs. Anna Palmer, 50, in connection with Delta's marriage to John Lee Menifield. He charged Mrs. Palmer made an affidavit that Delta was 18 when she obtained a marriage license, but that school records show she became 14 last month.

Menifield and his father-in-law, Charles F. Palmer, 59, were charged with abetting the perjury.

Calhoun then turned to investigation of the reported marriage this month of another 14-year-old Seattle school girl, Juanita Blinkley, a ward of the Superior Court, to Ralph Bouk, 19.

Md. Veteran Awarded $11,859 Injury Damages

Boston, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—After 12 hours' deliberation a Federal district court jury late yesterday awarded $11,859 damages to Charles A. Halpin, of Forest Glen, Md., in his suit brought on a $10,000 war risk insurance.

Halpin, who served overseas with the 52d Artillery during the World War, contended that he was totally and permanently disabled from a mental and nervous condition when discharged in December, 1919.

Damages were fixed at the rate of $57.50 per month since discharge.

WASHINGTON'S HOME NEWSPAPER

SPORTS The Washington Post SPORTS

20 WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1937 X ****

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation, this column will be written by other members of the sports department.)

By Walter Haight.

Perhaps this doesn't belong on the sport pages, just a few columns from where type told of one man beating another down only 24 hours ago. But the man about whom this true story is written would prefer to have the story, he believed never would be told, worked into the space along with the golf matches, the fights and the baseball news that he loved.

HAIGHT.

It's a far cry from the roar of a baseball crowd warming up to the home team's ninth-inning rally to a filthy room in Southwest Washington. There is no connection between the death-like silence of the golf gallery as the pro takes his stance for that all-important, eighteenth-hole putt and hungry mouths ajar as children look pitifully at their mother.

A fighter about to knock out the champion has no counterpart in a sick man trying to frame an existence for his family. A woman tennis star about to add the national title to her achievements doesn't mesh with an already overburdened mother awaiting an addition to her brood.

Early yesterday afternoon Dick Tennyson's telephone rang. In his capacity of assistant director of playgrounds, Tennyson receives many phone calls in a day. Takoma Park wants two new basketballs; the teacher at Rosedale has been having trouble with a certain boy; could he arrange a game for the Georgetown soccer team; the instructor at Garfield was ill—for years Tennyson and his phone have solved the problem of the city's recreation centers.

The phone ring was the ordinary one. His "Tennyson speaking" was his usual opening. But over the wire came words that seemed to stab him in the back. Tennyson finally managed to answer, "Err—that's fine. I'll tell him." It was with a shaking voice that Tennyson told me the story several hours later.

Last Christmas Eve, Bernie Harter, sports editor of the Herald, asked Tennyson if he could accompany him when the baskets prepared by the Playground Department were distributed to the poor families. Harter was so impressed by what he saw that he devoted his column to his tour of the poor sections and particularly to a family of six living in one room.

Christmas morning Tennyson received a phone call at home. Could he supply the name and address of the family to which Harder had referred? The man on the other end of the wire was a friend. Tennyson fumbled through the papers in his pocket and regretted that he had left the list at his office. Sure he would go downtown and get the necessary information. The man did not want his name mentioned to the family but he wanted to make sure that the poor people were taken care of for Christmas week.

Christmas was really Christmas for this one-room family after the man called. Turkey and all the trimmings; clothes for the four children; a sweater for the father; a dress for the mother; toys, fruit and candy. The man stayed for a couple of hours. The family was happy. The man was happy.

The father whispered what the kindly visitor already knew. Yes, there was to be another child—sometime before spring.

The man told the father that he wanted to know when the new heir arrived. He wanted to help give the youngster a start in life.

"But how am I to know where to find you if you won't even give me your name?" asked the father.

"Well, you call Mr. Tennyson at the playground office and he will get in touch with me," replied the man. "But please don't fail to do it."

The father said that he would comply with those instructions.

That was the phone call that Tennyson received yesterday.

"Mr. Tennyson, this is the man whose family was given that big Christmas by that friend of yours. When he was down here he told me to call you when the baby was born. Well, it came this morning. Please let the gentleman know," came the voice.

The gentleman the father referred to was George A. Simpson whose body was being lowered into the grave at almost the precise hour that this youngster came into the world.

George was a sportswriter on The Washington Times for 11 years and a splendid character throughout the 34 years of his life.

God must have had a big story to cover when He called on George.

Greco-Jacques Battle Looms As Highlight of C.U.-Terp Meet

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Old Joe Humphries would have been at his best introducing the middleweight contenders in the Maryland-Catholic University match tomorrow night, for two more colorful and surprising young boxers never climbed through the ropes than "Sully" Greco, Cardinal standard bearer, and Lancelot Jacques, of Maryland.

The two represent extremes in virtually every phase of their respective careers, for Greco is a veteran with almost three years of experience, while tomorrow's will be Jacques' third varsity fight. Greco likes to lead and tear into an opponent, but Jacques prefers to stand back and counter-punch. The latter counts heavily on a swift left jab followed by a right cross, while Greco places his trust in a ripping right, preferring to use his left more for defensive purposes.

Greco, oddly enough, has been the successful climax fighter in the majority of his team's matches. Last year, when Maryland invaded Brookland a heavy favorite, it was Greco's surprising draw with Ivan Nedomatsky that swung the pendulum of victory toward his mates.

Greco, who has not been as good this year as he was last, will have to give his best to win over Jacques, for one false move can mean disaster with this lad. The one point where Catholic's representative seems to have the edge is ruggedness.

Jacques can be a southpaw assassinator with that left if given half a chance. It sneaks up to the chin like an errant streak of lightning and hurts about as badly when it lands. It is a very damaging weapon when handled properly and Coach Heine Miller has shown his pupil how to use it to the best advantage.

In whipping Tony Ortenzi, Western Maryland's seasoned lightweight and former Eastern Conference champion, Jacques adequately demonstrated the power of his punching. Ortenzi not only got hit with the left, but a jolting right that almost laid him among the daisies. Just before Jacques entered the ring for this scrap, incidentally, Miller received a note from a school official warning against sacrificing young if willing boys on the altar of pugilism.

If Jacques keeps Greco coming to him he'll certainly land with the left, and a couple of lefts to the head will be the Brooklander's finish, especially if backed up by a right or two.

We'd take even money that this will be the night's most exciting fight—even after predicting that the other seven will be.

2 Parallel Holes Cost Golf Club $10,000 Suit

Chicago, Feb. 18 (AP).—A superior court jury today awarded damages of $10,000 to Paul Campion, 49, a WPA worker, for loss of his left eye after he had been struck by a golf ball. The jury held that the Chicago Landscape Co., the defendant, was negligent in permitting two holes on the course to run parallel so that golfers were playing in opposite directions.

'Finish Fight' On Title Bout Promised

Illinois Ring Chief Is Raked in Move to Give Bout to Schmeling.

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 18.—Madison Square Garden brought into the open today its fight to keep Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock from going through with his proposed bout with Joe Louis in Chicago and, simultaneously, compel the titleholder to fulfill his contract to fight Max Schmeling in New York, June 3.

In telegrams dispatched to all principals concerned, including Chairman Joseph Triner of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, the Garden Corporation's chief executive, Col. Reed Kilpatrick, served definite notice that all necessary legal weapons will be brought to bear to prevent Braddock from defending his title under any but the Garden's auspices.

Col. Kilpatrick's action, taken after consultation with the Garden's legal staff, dispelled any idea that the Garden would (1) permit Braddock to side-step his contract obligations here, without a struggle, or (2) accept a "cut" in the Chicago promotion in return for tearing up the Braddock-Schmeling papers.

Finish Fight Seen.

A finish fight, with Federal courts furnishing the battleground, was forecast as a result of Triner's telegraphed reply to Kilpatrick, that the proposed Braddock-Louis match did not interfere with the Garden's contract, inasmuch as the date fixed for the Chicago fight is nearly three weeks after the time set for a New York bout.

Col. Kilpatrick charged Triner was "evasive" in replying to the Garden's warning, which, after calling attention to Braddock-Schmeling contract details, added:

"Any action which you may take, designed to aid or permit Braddock to enter into a boxing contest with Louis or defend his title under other auspices will constitute interference by you with our contract with him. We shall hold you responsible for any damages accruing by reason of such interference and shall take such action against you as we deem advisable to protect our interests."

Gould Spies a Loophole.

The Garden's telegram concluded: "Boxing has already suffered far too much from actions of this kind and we are surprised that you individually or as boxing commissioner of the important State of Illinois would be involved in an attempt to break contracts rather than the insistence that they be lived up to."

Somewhat similar telegrams were dispatched to Sheldon Clark and George Getz, Chicago sportsmen associated with the Braddock-Louis promotion; Mike Jacobs, New York promoter who has Louis under long-term contract, and Joe Gould, manager of Braddock.

Gould has contended that the loophole in the Garden's contract is the date fixed for a Braddock-Schmeling bout. The champion's manager claimed the contract did not specifically bar Braddock from signing for a fight after June 3. Gould conceded, however, that he wanted to side-step the agreement with the Garden and Schmeling entirely, due to bigger financial inducements in Chicago.

Schmarr Sets a Record; Is Hero of Game.

Somewhat weakened by illness, Mr. Herman Schmarr of Catholic University's basketball team could only score seven points last night against LaSalle's belligerent basketers but they happened to be the points that won the ball game for C. U. 36-35 in a slam-bang session from start to finish.

It was a sweet victory for the Cards, for they were beaten by the Explorers in Philadelphia not long ago under questionable circumstances. Mr. Schmarr's seven points, incidentally, gave him an all-time individual scoring record for a District college player, a total of 204 points for the season. He broke his own mark of 198 points scored in 1936 and now has scored 583 points in three years at C. U.

Redskins Still Hunting For a Training Camp

The Washington Redskins' search for a suitable football training camp was continued with renewed activity yesterday after Georgetown Prep School authorities declined them the use of the school's facilities for three weeks next summer. This was the best site available, and both George Marshall, owner, and Coach Ray Flaherty had high hopes of obtaining its use.

Terps' Tourney Hopes Dashed By 41 to 35

Washington - Lee Cagers Win Puts Md. Out of Picture for Event.

Bob Spessard and four other boys from Washington and Lee University personally thwarted Maryland's hopes of competing in the forthcoming Southern Conference by administering a 41-35 defeat to their hosts in a fast and exciting game at College Park. It was the Terps' eighth defeat in 12 conference games.

Spessard went on no scoring spree as he did in the first game between the two when he registered 25 points, but he controlled the tap-off, which was directly responsible for Maryland's downfall, and contributed 13 points to his team's winning total. He missed innumerable shots under the basket, but this can be blamed on the close guarding of Charley Keller and "Little Knocky" Thomas who worried him like a couple of bill collectors.

G. U. Is Host To Carnegie

Hoyas' League Hopes at Stake Here Tonight.

Georgetown's waning Eastern Conference championship hopes will be pitted against the speed and accuracy of a towering Carnegie Tech quintet tonight at Tech High School, in the semi-final conference game to be played here this winter. Play starts at 8:30 o'clock.

Triumphant in their last three league games and apparently playing their best ball of the season, the Hoyas will be a distinct favorite over their guests, even though Tech held them to 17 points in winning the first game earlier in the season. Since then Coach Fred Mesmer's men have played against five teams using zone defenses and whipped all.

Carnegie won the conference laurels last winter, after tying Pittsburgh in the regular series and defeating it in a play-off, 32-27, but the Plaid has found the going very rough this season and its championship hopes are no more substantial than Georgetown's. Pitt, perennial champion, is leading the pack at this stage of the race, having lost only to Georgetown in a half-dozen games.

The Hoyas' title hopes are slim at best, for they are dependent on another team stopping Pitt as well as themselves. The District collegians have four league games remaining, including tonight's, and must win them all to continue in the race. Meanwhile, if no other club succeeds in stopping the Panthers this great finish will go for naught.

Grant Given A Davis Cup Position

Match With Japanese in May Likely to Go to San Francisco.

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 18.—The Australia-Mexico tie in the North American zone Davis Cup tennis competition will be played in Mexico Federal District around the first of May, while Japan and the United States will meet in a five-match series, probably on the Pacific Coast, early in May.

This was revealed coincident with the formation of a new committee to supervise America's international tennis competition, including the Davis and Wightman Cup campaigns and the development of talent for them. Announcement of the new committee was made today by Holcombe Ward, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Walter L. Pate, of New York, chairman of the new Davis Cup management group, said the venue of series with Japan will be announced in a few days but hinted strongly it would be awarded to the Pacific Coast when he said it was unlikely Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, would see action against the Nipponese.

"If "Bitsy" wants to make the trip to the Coast, I'd be darned glad to send him," said Pate. "Personally, I don't think we'll need him to defeat Japan, but you can be sure he'll be on the squad that will be assembled to prepare for Australia."

Should the match go to the Pacific Coast it will be for financial reasons all around. The Nipponese are expected to arrive in San Francisco during April, and they will be spared considerable traveling expense if the match is played either in San Francisco or Los Angeles.

American powers favor the West Coast, too, because the Japanese population there ought to make a larger "gate" than in any other part of the country. Tennis officials believed there will be sufficient American talent in the immediate vicinity at the time to stand off the Orientals' challenge.

Pate will announce the personnel of the 1937 cup squad in a short time. He definitely said Donald Budge, Gene Mako and Grant will be members of it. Budge and Mako virtually could handle the Japanese assignment alone. The remainder of the players will be chosen from among Sidney Wood, Bobby Riggs, Joe Hunt and Frank Shields, all of whom are in California, and Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J.

With Australia and the United States expected to survive their preliminary opposition, negotiations between the two countries are under way with a view to settling dates and venue for the zone final, as well as the type of court on which the matches will be played. Australia, it is said, strongly favors the West Side Club at Forest Hills, Long Island, with its stadium seating 16,000.

Louis Is Reported Sick; Matches Off

Chicago, Feb. 18 (AP).—Joe Louis, suffering from a severe cold and sinus infection, today was forced to cancel half a dozen exhibition bouts, Julian Black, co-manager of the Brown Bomber, said today on his return from Kansas City. Louis had engagements in Omaha, Des Moines, Wichita, Kans., and other Midwest cities.

Peters, Ex-Irish Star, Gets Coaching Post

Steele Risks Title With RiskoTonight

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 18.—Freddie Steele of Tacoma, champion of the rapidly reviving middleweight pugilistic class, will defend his crown in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night against Eddie (Babe) Risko, former titleholder.

Steel, hailed as one of the best 160-pounders the Far West has developed since the palmy days of the great Stanley Ketchel, will make his debut in a 15-round match before a critical gathering of metropolitan ringsiders. The Garden expects a turnout of 16,000 and "gate" of $45,000.

Broadway wagered, 2 to 1, tonight that Steele will whip Risko for the third time in less than a year. The Tacoma sharpshooter beat his rival in 10 rounds at Seattle, last March 24, in an over-the-weight engagement. He paid $25,000 for a shot at Babe's title four months later and won it with another 10-round verdict.

Casey Tosses Pinto in Bout At Arena

By Bill McCormick.

Steve (Crusher) Casey, the Killarney Killer, applied reverse English—or would it be Irish?—to Stanley Pinto at Turner's Arena last night, flopping the lop-eared Californian in exactly 13 minutes with what is technically described as body slam.

Pinto, the poor fellow, had his legs wrapped around Casey, squeezing away for dear life on the corned beef and cabbage Steven ate for dinner. Undaunted, the Crusher just fell over backward, squashing Pinto as neatly as an antique chair under Kate Smith.

A capacity crowd of 1,900 was on hand as the magnificent torso of Casey was unveiled for the first time here. The premiere seemed a success from every angle. Casey's face is frightful enough to please even those who liked Dracula and Frankenstein.

Really Can Wrestle!

Unlike most modern wrestlers, Casey is not festooned with gobs of fat, but actually boasts a hard, business-like framework. His hands are like nothing you ever saw that wasn't smoked or sugar-cured. Not only that, but there is a faint suspicion that the Irishman actually can wrestle!

During the time the bout lasted, Casey showed remarkable speed and agility for a big man as he whirled in and out of one hold after another. His bear hugs seemed, probably because he looks strong, to have authority and it is entirely possible that Pinto's expressions of anguish were only 10 per cent instead of the usual 99 per cent histrionic.

The engagement was fairly free from the usual whoopla tactics. Only a few times did the boys resort to slapping each other around the ring. On those occasions Casey always rammed home the last and most decisive, and what did you expect?

Cox Slaps Sledge.

Joe Cox, one of the better roughers, battled Bill Sledge and the audience in a semifinal scheduled for 30 minutes, but which ended in 17½ minutes, with Sledge hammered into submission. Cox sent Bill to the mat for the last time with a beautiful boot below the belt. The winner inflicted almost as much punishment on the audience, as he continually leered menacingly as they called him na-aa-sty names.

In other supporting bouts scheduled for 30 minutes, Matros Kirilenko worked to a draw with Henri Piers, Willie Davis earned a stalemate with Hank Barber, and George McLeod was downed by Hans Kampfer in 13 minutes.

District Girl Wins On Last Hole; Foe Beats Miss Miley

Tee Shot That Carries to 10 Feet of Green Wins Thriller for Local Ace in Match With Audrey Phipps; Minneapolis Star Wins, 3 and 1.

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 18.—Two youngsters, 19-year-old Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, and 22-year-old Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, advanced today to the final of the annual women's golf tournament at the Palm Beach Country Club with thrilling semifinal victories.

Patty, the fed-haired favorite, turned back a determined last-nine rally by Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., to win 3 and 1. Miss Dettweiler shaded Audrey Phipps, of Palm Beach one up in a see-saw battle.

Miss Miley took a one-up lead on the third as Patty chipped past the pin. She then dropped four in a row—she was short on the green on the fourth. Patty sank an 8-footer on the fifth, Miss Miley dubbed her second shot on the sixth and chipped short on the seventh. She went four down at the turn by dubbing her drive into the woods and topping her third shot on the ninth.

Miss Miley holed a 40-footer for a birdie on the tenth and one-putted for par on the eleventh; where Patty's second shot rolled into the mud. She cut her deficit to one hole with a birdie on the fourteenth as Patty three-putted. On the sixteenth her putt for a half ran around the rim of the cup, and conceded the seventeenth after three-putting.

Miss Dettweiler halved the first hole and won the second with a three as Miss Phipps shanked her approach. The third was halved, but Helen dropped the fourth as her putt rimmed the cup and Miss Phipps recorded a par.

Miss Dettweiler squared the match after a see-saw battle, with a long putt on the fourteenth, halved the fifteenth and lost the sixteenth as another putt skimmed around the hole.

A three won the seventeenth and rammed her tee shot to within 10 feet of the pin to win the eighteenth and the match.

The eighteenth-hole final will be played tomorrow.

Florida and N. J. Golfers Advance

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 18 (AP).—Two Floridians and two New Jersey players will meet here tomorrow in the 36-hole semifinals of the tournament of golf club champions.

Survivors today were Titleholder Claude Harmon, of Orlando, Fla.; Charles Whitehead, the 1935 winner, from Plainfield, N. J.; Mark Stuart, of Mamaroneck, N. J., and Bill Stark, of Jacksonville, Fla.

In the closest match of the quarter-finals, Stark eliminated his diminutive Jacksonville rival, Oscar Evers, after the match had gone 21 holes. Trailing 1 down at the turn, Evers squared matters on the fifteenth to carry the match overtime before he lost by three-putting the twenty-first green.

The widest victory was scored by Whitehead when he defeated C. Dudley Ward, of Rochester, N. Y., the tournament's "dark horse," 6 and 5.

Harmon was forced to put on a dazzling finish to win over Samuel I. Wilcox, jr., of Wilmington, Del., 3 and 2.

Dahlgren Seen Yankee Holdout

San Francisco, Feb. 18 (AP).—Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, may or may not have known it, but he stubbed his toe over another holdout when he purchased First Baseman Ellsworth Dahlgren as a possible successor to Holdout Lou Gehrig.

Dahlgren, it was learned today, returned two contracts to his former employers, the Boston Red Sox. His sale to the Yankees was announced yesterday.

The Red Sox had him farmed out to Syracuse in 1936, where he had a good year, including a .318 batting average.

Admitting he had sent back two contracts to the Red Sox, Dahlgren said: "I had a swell season with Syracuse, but the Red Sox wanted me to sign up at the same salary terms as last year. I think I deserve some recognition for good work."

Rudie, in 1937 Debut, Wins Easily in Hialeah Feature Race

Colt Is Near Record for Course

Proph Second, Prairie Dog Third; Winner Pays $9.60.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 18.—Rudie, a stake winner at Narragansett last November and a nominee for the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes of February 27, made his seasonal debut here today and gave a fine impression of himself in scoring an easy victory in the Idle Hour Handicap of 7 furlongs. Smoothly handled by Charlie Stevenson, the W. H. Gallagher colt, a son of Reigh Count-Daunt, won by 3 lengths in 1:22 4-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the track record.

Rudie was topweight of the half dozen three year olds in the field. He was not extended under his 118 pounds to beat J. W. Parrish's Proph. The latter finished a length and a half clear of Mrs. Emil Denemark's favored Prairie Dog. Then came Par, Swift Lad and Mary Elise in that order. Rudie paid $9.60.

Rudie dominated the running from the start. Stevenson, after taking the chestnut campaigner to the front, did a faultless job in the saddle. He nursed his mount along with a daylight advantage while racing Prairie Dog into defeat before reaching the stretch. Proph, eased off the pace in the backstretch, was sent after the leader in the final quarter mile but Rudie had too much for him. The Gallagher colt, had he been hard urged, might have equalled or bettered the track mark.

Ten $1,500 platers were on exhibition in the six furlong curtain raiser. Blue Donna, the $7.10 for two choice, found it an easy matter to outfoot the field. Under Apprentice Barba, the Donnacona filly dashed into a comfortable advantage in the first furlong. Widened the gap the farther she went and reached the wire with five lengths to spare. Witch Wings, one of the extreme outsiders and a paddock tip, ran a game race to finish second, a photo being used to separate that filly and the forward running Opoca. The time was 1:11 3-5.

While not the longest priced winner of the meeting, Jildac Rose, in winning the second race, paid enough so that there were no complaints from the comparative few that backed her. The dark gray filly, suddenly developing some of the speed passed on to her by her sire, Haste, drove home by a length and a half and returned $7.50 for a $2 straight ticket. Bravo Caruso headed Stool Pigeon for the place. Jockey Roberts brought Jildac Rose from a position behind the early leaders to win going away.

Dark Winter, one of the victims of a bad start in the third race, was good enough to run over the faster beginners and register by a length and a half. Speed, away well, took second money by four lengths from Deserter. Vitox was the worst sufferer in the Indian file start, while Anhelation also had scant chance. Speed overhauled B. Eighty to take a wide lead entering the stretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JILDAC ROSE, $70.50, $31.30, $13.10; BRAVO CARUSO, $9.30, $5.50; STOOL PIGEON, $10.50.

JILDAC ROSE worked her way up on the outside and, closing gamely, won going away. BRAVO CARUSO was used up racing STOOL PIGEON into defeat and tired at end. STOOL PIGEON had plenty of speed. SIR ROSE away poorly. DIRIGIBLE was hard ridden all the way. HIGH MABEL ran below true form. KING BEE away poorly and had no chance.

$2,00 DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $399.00.

THIRD RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, nonwinners since January 13. Start bad. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:09½. Winner, G. McMitkhell's br. h. (7), by Traumer—Sunwina. Trained by J. Bauer. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:37 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

VITOX	(LeBlanc)	108	10	10	9h	8h	10	10	10	5.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK WINTER, $11.10, $5.50, $4.20; SPEED, $5.00, $4.10; DESERTER, $6.50.

DARK WINTER worked his way up, began to close ground rapidly around turn, was steered to the outside and taking lead at furlong pole, won going away. SPEED ran into long lead entering stretch, but stopped badly. DESERTER ran good race. SUN TEMPEST had no excuse. ANHELATION broke badly, but closed a big gap. B. EIGHTY tired fast after showing speed for six furlongs. JOHNNYCAKE quit.

FOURTH RACE—Nursery course, 3 furlongs (straightaway). Purse, $800. For 2-year-olds filley. Start bad. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:41. Winner, J. W. Parrish's b. f. (2), by Percentage—Homebody. Trained by J. G. Goode. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:33 4-5.

†Wheatley Stable-Belair Stud entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENEVRA M., $21.70, $12.60, $7.50; GERT B., $7.20, $5.00; WATCHCASE, $7.00.

GENEVRA M. away rapidly, ran straight down the center of the track and held on gamely. GERT B. broke from the extreme outside and finished fast. WATCHCASE, away good, had no mishap. TEA LEAVES broke slow and in a tangle, but closed gamely and would have been a stout factor with an equal break. CONNITION stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200. The Idle Hour Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:06. Winner, W. H. Gallagher's ch. c. (3), by Reigh Count—Daunt. Trained by J. L. Donovan. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:22 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
PROPH	(Wall)	109	6	2	3½	3h	2h	2h	2h	9.60

MARY ELISE	(Roberts)	104	1	6	5h	5h	5h	6	6	8.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUDIE, 39.60, $5.40, $3.20; PROPH, $6.10, $3.2 0; PRAIRIE DOG, $2.70.

RUDIE, handling his weight well, broke alertly and was sent to the front with a rush and perfectly rated along, easily held race safe. PROPH got away well in motion, but was eased back, began to move up around turn, made his bid in stretch, but was not good enough. PRAIRIE DOG was hard ridden to gain a contending position and tired badly at end. PAR came with a rush. MARY ELISE never a factor.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (turf). Purse, $1,200. The Lost Horizon. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:32. Winner, A. T. Partridge's ch. g. (5), by Reign Count—Annie Gowdy. Trained by J. Kirby. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
CONTE	(Westrope)	108½	3	3	4h	4h	4½	3h	1½	$8.95

HER REIGH	(Balaski)	110	2	2	3h	3h	3½	5h	7	6.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONTE, $19.90, $5.80, $3.50; OBSERVANT, $4.10, $3.00; ZAY, $3.10.

CONTE was hustled into a contending position going into first turn, was rated along to the final quarter mile, where he closed with a rush and was drawing away at end. OBSERVANT displayed good speed, but was driven all the way to make ZAY stop and tired when challenged. ZAY was kept close to pace and had no mishap. SILENT SHOT closed a big gap. HER REIGH had speed for seven furlongs, then tired as if short.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, nonwinners since January 13. Start fair. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01½. Winner, Mrs. E. B. Carpenter's ch. f. (4), by Golden Guinea—Sweet Briar. Trained by E. B. Carpenter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:37 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUSBY, $8.30, $4.30, $3.40; PRINCE DEAN, $5.60, $4.30; BRINY DEEP, $3.70.

BUSBY, under good handling, made up ground gradually, came around PRINCE DEAN entering stretch, drew away and won nicely in hand. PRINCE DEAN assumed command around turn, but was no match for the winner. BRINY DEEP came with a belated rush in stretch. CONTRAST ran good race. MYSTIC FLYER tired at end of six furlongs.

Fair Grounds Results.

Gonzaga Choice Over St. Johns

Alumni Fives Will Oppose In Opener

Choice of Purple Made on Basis of Win When Foes' Star Was Out.

CATHOLIC STANDINGS.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Gonzaga	2	0	1.000
St. John's	2	1	.667
Georgetown Prep	0	3	.000

By John R. Vosburgh.

With all the harmony of a mountaineer feud, Gonzaga and St. John's High open fire on each other again tonight before an expected capacity throng of 2,500 onlookers in the Catholic University gymnasium. The Catholic Prep school basketball championship and a good claim to the city schoolboy title are hanging in the balance.

Making the hostile atmosphere a bit more warlike, the Gonzaga Alumni will match marksmanship and other rough-and-ready wiles with the St. John's Alumni in a punchy preliminary at 7 p. m. A liberal array of well-known former college performers are taking the court for each school.

In the main event, Gonzaga takes the court a slight favorite on the basis of its squeaky 24-to-21 conquest of the Cadets in their first game a few weeks ago when a capacity crowd jammed the Catholic University basketball plant.

Swagart Was Out.

Then, on that occasion, however, Johnny Swagart, leading scorer of St. John's, sat out most of the game with a bad ankle and Gonzaga was forced to stage a rally in the last period to send it into an extra period. St. John's has ruled the Catholic League roost for two years in a row.

By no means, however, are the Johnnies depressed by the brilliant record Gonzaga is taking into the game. The loss of Swagart, the Cadets figure, was the difference between victory and the flopperoo in the first encounter and Gonzaga's string of victories is merely good reading material.

Very good reading material, indeed, admit the guys from Gonzaga. Thirteen victories in 14 starts is worth perusing, especially since two of them were over Eastern's interhigh champions, one over Western and one over a team named St. John's.

Beat Eastern.

Gonzaga's 25-22 conquest of Eastern yesterday put another bright feather in the Purple's hat. The work of Tommy Hanley, in particular, impressed Coach Mitchell whose big gun, Jimmy Boyle was wreaking little damage, scoring 2 points in comparison to 9 for Hanley. Chip Collins and Connolly, O'Brien and Walsh comprise the remainder of the squad from whom the starting five will be picked.

For St. John's, Swagart and lanky Jimmy Giebel, All-Prep end in football; Joe Gallagher and Francis Battiste, guards, and Jack (Ace) Reges, center, are ready for action. Reges is one of Gonzaga's chief worries, and Walsh, the Purple center, faces a major assignment.

St. John's though beaten twice by the interhigh champs—one in two extra periods, has a string of victims which includes Central, Roosevelt, Georgetown Prep, to mention only a few.

Among the familiar figures of the court in the alumni game will be the famous Farrell brothers for Gonzaga, along with Joe Lynch, Horse Holbrook, Billy Boyle, Jack Road, Durkin and others, while St. John's will have Mike Scanlon, Gene Augusterfer, the Scheele brothers, Bob Smith, Mike Simone, Billy Counselman, Gab Hartnett, K. Mulvihill, Johnny Breen, George Spates and Andy Morris.

St. Anthony's Prep Five Downs Gonzaga, 47-19

The St. Anthony's Prep School five extended its winning streak to 11 yesterday by trouncing the Gonzaga High Seniors, 47-19, on the St. Anthony's court. The Saints issue a challenge to all District high schools.

Bluege, Nats' Great Infielder, Fit for 16th Year in Game

By Dillon Graham,
Associated Press Sports Writer

"It's just a simple combination of natural ability, perfect condition, agility and keen study of plays and players" the Washington veteran explained as he prepared to push South for his sixteenth season.

Many of today's American League active stars were in rompers when Bluege broke in back in 1921. Only Jimmy Dikes and Luke Sewell, of Chicago, and Goose Goslin, of Detroit, rank him in service.

Because the Senators want to develop youngsters, Ossie plays utility roles now. But when he steps on the diamond, other players watch with admiration, amazed by the easy rhythmical perfection of his style. Shifting all around the infield in 90 games last season, he led the league in fielding at third base and shortstop and was runner-up at second base.

"I improved my natural abilities by serious study," Bluege said, in analyzing himself. "I've always been agile and acquiring a quick 'break' on balls helped, too."

Ossie sways easily on the balls of his feet, ready for a spring in either direction. It's that extra step that permits a player to snag some balls and enables him to handle hard ones easily.

Slight in physique, Bluege weighs 155. By keeping in top shape the year around, he never has arm or leg worries.

"My arm is as strong as ever. And my legs still can cover ground," he said. "Experience has taught me to eliminate all waste effort."

While his pitcher winds up, Bluege eyes the hitter's bat and body, eager for any slight move indicating his hitting intentions. He's never caught napping, for he plays every batter as though the ball was coming to him.

Asking pardon for an honest expression that could be construed as bragging, Bluege asserted he believed he could play third base as well as any player he's ever seen.

Many major league teams would like him. Only a year ago Washington refused a Yankee offer of $25,000 and a player for him. That's a lot of dough for an old-timer.

Occidental Pin Team Loses to Heurich

Brewers Take 2d Place and Kill Rivals' Hopes for League Pennant.

The champion Heurich Brewers put the damper on the pennant aspirations of Occidental Restaurant in the feature match of the District League last night at Georgetown, swamping the Buchholz crew three games with a barrage of heavy pin-spilling. The Brewers, led by Ed Blakeney's 376 set shot a total of 1,779 to move into the runner-up position, separated by a margin of one game from the pacesetting Rose Liquor combination.

Three wins by Occidental would have changed the standings completely, putting them atop the loop as Rose Liquor dropped a game to Arcadia. Maxie Rosenberg kept the Liquormen in the No. 1 position, pounding the maples for a big set of 406. Harry Aiken contributed a 383 set as the Arcadians, in defeat, out-rolled the leaders 1812 to 1810.

Local pinmen will be seeking laurels on foreign alleys tonight. Tom O'Donnell and his all-star Sea Grill combination, invading the Nutmeg State stronghold at Williamantic, Conn., where they engage the famous Blue Ribbon aggregation in team, doubles and singles matches. Carrying the banner for the Grillmen will be Astor Clarke, Hokie Smith, Bill Krauss, Ed Blakeney and Joe Harrison. Tomorrow night the team will compete in the Eastern Sweepstakes, a 15-game event which Ed Blakeney won last year.

Dan Steers, of the Sand Blowers, cracked two season records in the Miscellaneous Tax Unit League, collecting a 161 game and 395 set, his team winning three from the Maple Nuts. The Easy Marks boosted its lead to four games with an odd-game win over Question Mark . . . Nash Post pulled up to within two games of first place in the American Legion League with a clean sweep over Sergt. Jasper . . . Anna Vo'his (General Office) rolled a 126 game and Anna Totten (Plant) a 312 set for high individual honors in the C. & P. Ladies Telephone League . . . Gladys Thompson tied Marie Anderson's season record set of 326 in aiding the Alley Cats triumph over the Tudors . . . Woodward & Lothrop stopped the leading Kanns Sons two games in the Department Store League, cutting their lead to one game over Palais Royal.

Rinaldi Is Held A. A. U. Cage Title Threat

Tailors Have Rolled Up an Average of 45 Points; Team Bolstered.

Among the numerous candidates aiming to succeed the George Washington Freshmen as the unlimited A. A. U. basketball champs of the District, the Rinaldi Tailors are rapidly forging to the front as a foremost contender. When The Post tournament opens on March 1 in the Heurich gymnasium, the Tailors will bring out a line-up bristling with highly respected names of the local basketball firmament.

Coached by Carroll Shore, the Georgetown wizard, the Tailors have hit a winning streak of late which has rolled up 1,091 points. Rinaldi's riflemen have won 21 games in 26 starts and boast the formidable average of 45 points per game. The opposition has solved the Rinaldi defense for exactly 671 points or 26 points per appearance.

But Coach Shore is taking no chances of his team's doing a fadeout in this A. A. U. scramble. Already he has strengthened his forces. The management reports that Captain Gerald Burns, Western High ace; Francis (Reds) Daly, former Tech star, and Bob Sherwood and Heinie Schmidt of the Georgetown Freshmen are all due to don Rinaldi uniforms.

A Potent Roster.

Not weak, however, is the cast which has been carrying the Tailors' colors thus far. Any new members of the squad will find flashy companionship in such standouts as Pickles Walker, Reds Sullivan, Ray Curtin, Tommy Folliard, Tuffy Peacock, Bob Smith, Acky Viana and Indian Jacobs.

Entry blanks for teams are available at The Post Sports Department, various Boys Clubs and Heurich gymnasium. They must be filed with the Boys Club of Washington, 230 C street, by midnight, Wednesday.

Ingram Due Gevinson Bout If He Wins Over Jaramello

Ray Ingram, the transplanted Florida featherweight who kicked around in the preliminaries many days before his true worth was recognized, will get his big chance against the District's best drawing card, by order of the boxing commission and with the sanction of all concerned.

Ingram is matched against Cristobal Jaramello, of Puerto Rico, in an eight-round cofeature at Turner's Arena next Monday night. If he defeats Jaramello, and looks good doing it, he will be popped in with Lou Gevinson in about a month.

The boxing commission yesterday requested such a bout to settle the featherweight championship of the District, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn quickly agreed, and Manager Matt Twomey, who pulls the strings on Lou just as quickly sanctioned the contest.

Gevinson will be on the shelf for about a month because of a cut eye, received in his losing bout against Johnny Pena last Monday night.

When, and if, Gevinson and Ingram tangle, the winner will be in line for an outdoor shot against Pena when the open-air season gets under way.

Thirty rounds of fighting will comprise the card next Monday night. In other eights, Sid Silas will tangle with Wether Arcelli and Eric Lawson will draw Charles (Hobo) Williams. Frank Tymosko and Stanley Ketchell, heavyweights, are carded for a six.

Tech Is Choice Over Central Five Today

Interhigh Standings.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Eastern	7	2	.777
Western	5	3	.625
Roosevelt	5	3	.625
Tech	4	3	.571
Central	2	5	.286
Wilson	0	7	.000

Apparently none the worse for its change in coaching, Teck High attempts to go into a virtual three-way tie for second place in the interhigh series today. Central's erstwhile sharpshooters provide the opposition. Roosevelt and Wilson provide the preliminary exhibition of the doubleheader starting at 3:15 p. m. in the Tech gym.

With Coach Rusty Thompson picking up where Coach George Freilicher left off, Tech has developed into a serious threat for second place despite loss of its blueribbon guard, Dick See. The Maroon's 26-25 upset of Western, Tuesday, with See on the sidelines with a dislocated ankle makes it the choice to subdue Central.

A win for the Techmen will toss them into a tie for third place with Western, but in view of Roosevelt's playing Wilson, it would amount to a three-way tie for second place. The Rough Riders will have won one more game than Western and Tech, but all three have lost the same number.

Roosevelt's game with Wilson is more or less a formality to everybody but Wilson rooters. The Green has been improving with every game and its showing against Eastern when it set a new high for itself with 21 points boosted its stock, particularly in view of the fact that the inter-high champions had to keep their regulars in action for more than three-quarters of the contest.

Court Survey Fails to Show Age as Factor

court for concurring in cases invalidating Federal provisions of law. He has participated in 41 such cases, according to the Gilbert tabulation, and dissented in none of them. He wrote the court's opinion in three such cases—none of which were New Deal enactments.

Justice James C. McReynolds, who came to the court three years after Justice Van Devanter, has participated in 35 cases holding Federal enactments unconstitutional. He dissented in one. But he holds the record for all time in the writing of the court's opinions in such cases. He was the author of nine of them—only one of which invalidated a New Deal law.

Justice Pierce Butler has concurred in holding 26 Federal laws unconstitutional, dissenting in no cases and writing none of the opinions. Justice Owen J. Roberts has participated in cases holding 16 Federal laws unconstitutional and dissented from only one decision. He has written the court's opinion in five such cases—all but one of which invalidated laws passed since Mr. Roosevelt has been President.

The fact that all the justices on the Supreme Court have concurred in holding some of the New Deal legislation, as well as Federal laws prior to the New Deal unconstitutional, along with evidence received in other quarters, indicates that none of the present membership of the Supreme Court is sympathetic to the President's court reorganization scheme. Indeed, from one quarter it is reported the so-called three liberal justices of the court are more resentful toward the President's plan than conservative members of the tribunal. Only Justice Brandeis, of the so-called liberal trio, is over 70 years old.

Critic of Curbs.

Justice Stone, regarded as the member of the Supreme Court most favorable to Mr. Roosevelt's aspirations and objectives, in an address to the American Bar Association in 1928—while he was a member of the court—spoke out strongly in criticism of schemes to curb the tribunal's power.

On that occasion he had nothing to say about proposals for increasing the size of the court because such a thing had not then been suggested, but he did deal with proposals permitting Congress to override an adverse decision of the Supreme Court—such as that just made by Senator Burton K. Wheeler—and requiring an affirmative vote by at least seven members of the court to invalidate a Federal act—such as that suggested currently by Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana.

Justice Stone explained he was not discussing the political question of whether the power of the court should be limited but held that "in a gathering of lawyers it is entirely appropriate that some consideration should be given to the effects of the particular methods of limitation which have been suggested."

Two Devices Proposed.

"The devices proposed for setting limits upon the exercise of this power," he continued, "have been aimed at giving to statutes a weight which they would otherwise not possess in their competitive struggle with the provisions of the Constitution. They have been of two kinds. It has been suggested that a statute might be made to prevail over constitutional objections, if it were passed by the legislative body twice. It has also been suggested that if a statute whose constitutionality was contested were upheld by a vote of a minority of two or three of the members of the court it should become law, despite all constitutional objections.

"When any such device is applied to the function which the court exercises as the arbiter between the rival claims of governments or the separate branches of the National Government, the question at once arises: shall it be applied equally to statutes passed by Congress and to statutes passed by State Legislatures, or shall it be applied to only one, the acts of Congress?

"If applicable only to one, it is apparent that the sovereign State and the National Government no longer stand on a plane of equality in matters of constitutional right or immunity, but the way is opened for the gradual curtailment of the constitutional powers granted to or reserved by one through the enactment of statutes by the other which, whenever their constitutionality is assailed, have greater weight before the court than the Constitution itself."

"Field of Conflict."

He went on to contend that if the device of the weighted statute were to be applied to both Congressional and State enactments in the field of conflict of powers under the American dual system, "then each would be given the opportunity to extend its own constitutional power in particular fields at the expense of the other."

Justice Stone also pointed out that governments do not always exercise their severeign powers through enactment of statutes, but "may act with equal competency through the executive or the judicial power and such action, when it is supported by the Constitution is as authoritative as if the government spoke through legislation alone."

In that same article Justice Stone spoke of "judicial independence" as the "pole star" by which the Supreme Court has shaped its course. He contended that "from the history of the court we know that firm adherence to its established traditions of judicial independence and of performance of judicial duty with painstaking thoroughness and fidelity are the strongest assurance that it will meet and sustain the responsible of the future.

"Often unjustly and unreasonably attacked," he continued, "those attacks have left no scars. The faithful performance of the great work of the court day by day and year by year has won to it deserved confidence in its disinterestedness and stability as an institution, and brought it to an undisputable triumph over hasty criticism and the dissatisfaction of the moment.

"Those who bear its responsibilities now and in the future will do well to ponder this significant fact and to recall as well that in the course of its long history the only wounds from which it has suffered have been those which, in the words of former Justice Hughes (now Chief Justice) were 'self-inflicted.'"

It is somewhat difficult to appraise the amount of work done by a justice of the Supreme Court. One barometer is the number of written opinions prepared by each justice, either as the opinion of the full or a majority of the court or as a dissenting or concurring opinion. Frequently it requires as much work to write a dissenting opinion as to prepare the affirmative statement.

Amount of Work Varies.

And the amount of work required for each opinion varies greatly. A complicated tax case or constitutional issue requires a great deal more research and a lengthier opinion than a simple question of law regarding contracts or damages. Thus some decisions of the court run to 20 or more printed pages, while others are not more than three or four pages.

The Chief Justice has the right to reserve for himself the preparation of any opinion in which he votes with the majority and thus takes some of the more difficult cases, or assigns them to the older members of the court when they are on the side of the majority.

Thus a tabulation of the number of opinions written by a given justice is not conclusive as to his industry. But since that is the only available method of measuring the work of the justices the results of such a tabulation are given here for whatever value they may have. The tabulation given here is taken from articles of Prof. Felix Frankfurter in the Harvard Law Review and from the daily journal of the Supreme Court.

Cardozo Led in 1932.

It shows—not going back beyond the term of court which commenced in October, 1932—that in each of the intervening years the largest number of opinions has been written by a justice under 70 years old. In 1932 Justice Cardozo, now 66, had that honor. In 1933 and 1934 the honor went to Justice Stone, now 64. In 1935 and so far in the current term of court Justice Roberts, now 61, wrote the largest number.

But with the exception of Justice Justice Van Devanter, the members of the court over 70 years old did not lag far behind. Thus in 1932 Chief Justice Hughes, who has administrative duties not imposed on other members of the court—wrote only five less than Justice Cardozo did that year and in 1935 only two fewer than Justice Roberts.

Tabulation of the number of opinions written each term of court since October, 1932, is given in an adjoining column.

The number of opinions written by each justice, in general, depends on the number of opinions the court turns out. Thus for the last few years the nine justices have divided up the work suitable to themselves, handing down opinions in every case argued before they adjourned for the summer in June—and, as shown by The Washington Post survey last, having heard every case on the docket ready for argument.

Record of Twenties.

Back in the twenties when the court docket was congested each justice of the court did more work than they do today. Thus in 1924 Justice McReynolds wrote 40 opinions. In that year Justice Butler wrote 25; the then Chief Justice Taft, 33; Justice Van Devanter, 12; Justice Sutherland, 29, and Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, then 84 years old, wrote 35.

Writing opinions, however, is only a part of the work of a Supreme Court justice. About one half of the term is devoted to hearing arguments and various authorities on the subject contend that the important work is done in the conference room and that each justice must study every case coming before the court. On entering the conference room each member of the court must be ready, as Justice Holmes once put it, "to recite" regarding each case called up for discussion by the Chief Justice.

Excess Reserves Up to New High

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported today member bank excess reserves climbed $10,000,000 during the week ended February 17 to a 1937 high of $2,190,000,000.

The upturn was traceable largely to a $9,000,000 drop in money circulation. This money, flowing back to the banks, bolstered the supply of idle funds. Excess reserves, or loanable funds, will be reduced by about $1,500,000,000 when a 33 1-3 per cent increase in deposit reserve requirements ordered by the board is fully effective May 1.

The Treasury has a $300,000,000 bill maturity March 16 and $502,000,000 of 3 per cent notes maturing April 15. "We want to do this financing and not disturb the money market," Mr. Morgenthau said yesterday.

"We are in the midst of the change in reserve requirements and we want to borrow money as reasonably as possible. "Just how to do this is a very difficult problem."

Coal Output Increases With Industrial Rise

Bituminous Gains 17 Per Cent in Year; 5 Per Cent for Anthracite.

New York, Feb. 18.—Progress is clearly discernible in every phase of operation in the coal-mining industry for the year just ended, according to Coal Age today. Production is up; underground mechanization has registered further marked gains; mechanical cleaning looms large in preparation-plant installation records; fatality rates promise to hit a new low.

Bituminous output in 1936 followed closely the indices of general industrial activity. Total output was 431,950,000 tons, an increase of 17 per cent over the 1935 production of 369,324,000 tons. Prices were marked by a relatively high degree of stability. An increase of between 9 and 10 per cent in bituminous output is forecast for 1937, based on a reasonable advance estimate of the general business level and taking into account seasonal fluctuations.

Anthracite output ended 1936 with a 5 per cent increase. Excluding 4,000,000 tons or more of stolen coal, total legitimate output is estimated at 54,760,000 tons in 1936, as compared with the 1935 total of 52,159,000 tons.

Developments in 1936 were marked by a material increase in sales of stoker and pulverized-coal-firing units. Small stokers were in the van of the upsurge, installation of domestic and small commercial heating services rising to an estimated total of 80,500 in 1936, an increase of about 82 per cent over the 1935 total of 44,288 units. In comparison, shipments of all classes of oil burners in 1936 were only 40 per cent over 1935.

Brokers' Loans Rise $2,000,000 for Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $1,009,000,000 for the week ended Wednesday, an increase of $2,000,000 compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $944,000,000.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Improve With Strength in Metal Shares; Government Bonds Firm.

New York, Feb. 18.—Stocks improved without much change in volume, the public fancy turning to the metal shares. Outside that group the advances were small and in spots the demand for shares was slack. Stock sales were around 2,100,000 shares. Government bonds again were firm. May wheat rose ⅜ of a cent to 135¾ cents a bushel.

As a counter to purely speculative activities on the Stock Exchange and in other stock markets, induced by the business outlook and the incentive given by the Government to hopes and fears of inflation, the SEC obviously is planning a drive against manipulators. It will have a wide field in which to display its powers, for the mere passage of the securities control legislation had no great effect in hampering the professional operators. If manipulation can be curbed, some good will have been done; but in reality the public which rushes into the boom ends of stock markets likes that sort of thing. It likes to have tips, and to try to beat the pools to the selloff.

Much of the day's activity took place in low priced issues, but the tone hardened in better grades. Price fluctuations naturally were the greatest in the upper brackets, particularly among preferred issues that have been absorbed to such an extent that almost no floating supply is available. United States Rubber was a case in point. On top of its jump of a dozen points or so yesterday, it was shoved up about as much again today.

Steel was a little firmer, but the best grade industrials turned to Standard Oil for their cue. That issue pushed ahead to a new high price. Another stock in about the same price range to touch a new peak was International Nickel. American Telephone, on the other hand, was hurt by gossip of lower rates. General Electric softened, along with Allis Chalmers, Manville, and Western Union. Lower down, profit taking held back New Haven preferred, but a new drive in American Zinc got under way. Radio managed to rise a fraction in greater activity, and Armour did better.

Silver Price.

Gossip of a possible lowering of the Treasury's buying price for silver did not affect the silver shares. On the contrary, the advanced. Most of the metal group was strong. Gains ranged from 1 to 4 points in American Metal preferred, Cerro de Pasco, Silver King, Federal Mining, Anaconda, Kennecott and Inspiration.

A few first grade rails were well backed, including Chesapeake, Central and Southren Pacific. Utilities were a bit heavy. The most active stock in any group was Alleghany. Its prior preferred soared 5 points. Specialties to find favor were Byron Jackson, Colgate, Philip Morris, National Distillers, Schenley and Evans Products.

Lack of spirit in the stock market reflected the absence of definite information on a number of subjects now agitating the financial mind. A few days ago it looked as though an immediate decision would be taken by the Administration looking to the penalizing of foreign capital invested here, or at least to the prevention of a further influx. After a series of talks at Washington among the authorities, and after suggestions on the subject given by well known experts outside the official family, it would appear that nothing hasty will be done.

Hot Money.

It may well be that, after listening to all sides, the President will find it no simple matter to solve the problem, and that, furthermore, the menace from so-called "hot money" may not be so terrific as had been supposed. One answer to the question which gets to the root is that our monetary policy needs to undergo a fundamental change with respect to undervaluation of the dollar and the piling up of the Federal deficit. The objection to that, from the politician's standpoint, is that it would tend to halt inflation. Speculators see how the wind is blowing in that sector.

Other factors working on stocks are the uncertainty on labor, particularly in the coal and steel industries; legislation of a restrictive nature which might follow a dictatorial stand on the Supreme Court, and the possibility of crop damage in the Western States. On another front the outlook is becoming clearer. It is hinted that this country will match foreign shipbuilding programs, ship for ship, which means at least $1.50 for each $1. If Great Britain is to spend $7,500,000,000 in five years, we might do a bit better, and the effect on credit inflation generally and on raw materials prices specifically, will be considerable.

Lead and Zinc Up To Seven-Year Highs

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Forced by continued heavy demand and higher quotations abroad, leading producers today raised the domestic price of lead .25 of a cent to 6.25-30 cents a pound in New York, a new seven-year high.

Domestic zinc joined the upward parade, producers raising the price .20 of a cent a pound to 6.20 cents. The new price also established a seven-year high level.

War Propaganda EXPOSED!

ONE OF THE most effective World War weapons was clever propaganda. And every Nation had its special staff of propagandists.

IT WAS THE job of these men to lay down a steady barrage of words . . and pictures . . that made other men KILL!

HOW MUCH of this propaganda was truth . . and how much LIES? How would it effect you . . today?

A WALL OF PROTECTION

CERTAIN-TEED provides efficient insulation as well as great structural strength.
Applied to interior walls, CERTAIN-TEED offers these important advantages: Insulates as it beautifies . . . Provides permanent decoration . . . Corrects acoustics . . . Reduces the passage of sound through walls and ceilings . . . And it is easily cleaned. Ordinary insulating materials lose much of their efficiency through the absorption of moisture. This cannot happen with CERTAIN-TEED. Use it inside your house—for new construction and for remodeling.
No Down Payment, 3 Years to Pay on the F. H. A. Plan.
COSTS NOTHING TO FIND OUT
Don't delay. Get the facts. Inquire about our low prices—and save. Old roofs made new by applying CERTAIN-TEED Millerized shingles right over the old roof.
